EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

HUNT up your Presidential candidates.

LADY DIXIE'S corset steel saved her life. 'Course it did.

IF resolutions would kill Dukes he would have been dead long ago.

SENATOR EDMUNDS, of Vermont, would make a popular Presidential candidate.

HERR MOST, like the average Democrat, discourseth about "centralization of power."

THE murders in the United States last year average two a day, the executions two a week.

NEW YORK city is passing through a milk famine, on account of a strike on the part of those who furnish milk to the city retailers.

IF it be true that Senator Emory has an income of one thousand dollars a day, he is one of the most powerful oil kings in the Bradford region.

THE Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania turned out thirty-five female doctors the other day. Philadelphia is always bound to get ahead in the medical diploma business.

THE London authorities are becoming alarmed at the atrocities committed in the name of Ireland and have strengthened the police force by an addition of one thousand men.

IT seems that the Rev. R. Heber Newton, the Episcopalian clergyman who has managed to attract so much attention to himself by denying the inspiration of the Scriptures, is to be tried for heresy.

A NEBRASKA man is reported to have committed suicide because he owed seventy-five cents. If the citizens of Tennessee and Mississippi felt that way, the price of coffins would at once go up.

SENATOR CAMERON has undergone a surgical operation which has relieved him mainly from the distressing malady from which he was suffering, and he hopes soon to be well enough to take a trip to Florida.

THE legislature has settled down to routine work, and the indications are that the roses will bloom before the end is reached. In other words, the members feel that they should sit for one hundred and fifty days!

POLK, Tennessee's defaulting treasurer, proposes that he be set at liberty upon restoring the amount of his stealings. Such an act on his part would set an example that might be painful to a state that still persists in its design to rob its creditors.

MUCH as may be said about ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, we believe he made one of the most upright and dignified chief executives that ever entered the White House and we would be pleased to see him nominated and elected Governor of Ohio.

PERHAPS the feeling most generally provoked by William Sprague's nomination by the Democrats to the Rhode Island Governorship is one of mingled surprise and amusement, but after Butler's conquest of Massachusetts, nothing is impossible in New England politics.

A GATHERING of prominent Democrats, including Bayard, Pendleton and Watterson, is promised at a reception soon to be given by the Iroquois club, of Chicago, and the Democratic managers generally are in cold perspiration in view of speeches likely to be made at that time.

Judge Black's Opinion.

The utterances of an individual who has more than once correctly named, in advance of nominations, the next President of the United States, are always of interest. The Philadelphia Press says that in an amusing mosaic of opinions and comments extracted from Judge Black the aged jurist touches themes so wide apart as Mormonism, the Presidency, the Star Route trial and his own relations with Ingersoll. On the subject of polygamy Judge Black is emphatic in denouncing the recently meditated legislation as based upon prejudice. He denies that he has been apotheosised as the patron of the Latter Day Saints. He is the exponent only of the Constitution, and lends himself to the Utah brethren merely as he would lend himself to any other association—to force the courts to pronounce enlightened decisions on vital questions in controversy. As to the alleged supplications put up in his spiritual behalf, he implies, though too polite to assert, that the prayers of the iniquitous are without force and repels the covenant sought to be fastened upon him by these fleshly children of light.

It is not, however, in defining his attitude in great controversies like this that the Judge's averments reach their most pungent interest. Asked point-blank whether he had ever lent his arm to the sacrilegious Ingersoll, or held his aged head in confidential propinquity to the picturesque infidel's ear, he puts in a denial which, while emphatic and conclusive, suggests a good deal to the dubitative layman? As we understand the Judge, he consented to come within the sound of Ingersoll's whisper only that he might learn the ingenuous trust of that otherwise incorrigible skeptic in the success of his star route clients. While Ingersoll has no faith in Divinity and no definite theory of a hereafter, we gather from the Judge's explanation that the advocate of Brady and Dorsey counts upon the jury to bring his clients unspotted from the jury box. Faith, we are told, is a sentiment of very slow growth, but the seed of it is inextinguishable, no matter how sterile the soil. The country will learn with pleasure that so brilliant an intellect as Ingersoll's is plastic enough to doubt and believe at the same time; for if a man can put his faith in a Washington jury, he can't find much difficulty in ultimately adopting the accepted theory of salvation. Nor is the remarkable light thrown upon Ingersoll attenuated by the equal faith of the Attorney General in the jury. That official also confided to Judge Black his confidence that the twelve were sure to convict, so that, if the long trial should have no other good result, it will be regarded as having sown the seed of regeneration in soil so obstinate as Ingersoll's mind, and that, in view of his genius, will be counted no small gain.

Perhaps the most striking of the Judge's garrulous confidences is his notion of presidential possibilities next year. He advises his Republican friends who haven't set aside a candidate to cast their eyes upon Omar Conger, of Michigan. Not because he is eloquent or brilliant like Blaine, long-headed and sagacious like Edmunds, but because he has the "stuff in him more than Garfield and Blaine combined." This is one of those Jacksonian expressions which would go a long way with Democrats, but will hardly wean the Republican party en masse to the Judge's predelection. Hardly less interesting than this vaticination is the companion oracularism concerning the Democratic choice. Hendricks he holds eliminated from possibilities, while McDonald looks like the coming candidate. The Judge's own heart, however, is true to Hancock, to whom he somewhat mysteriously alludes as an honest man; but whether as contra-distinguished from the other two, or on a parity with the others, we are left to ponder.

There is no more amiable aspect of a public man tranquil in honor long and worthily accumulated, than by divulging his convictions upon themes that excite public curiosity or comment. Judge Black, like General Sherman, talks admirably upon an infinite variety of themes, and it does not detract from the interest of the narrative or the charm of the sayings that they are tinctured with the prejudices and adorned with the eccentric humor of the speaker It is a wide conversational sweep that reaches from the prayers of the Mormons for the Judge's welfare to the men and measures of the next political campaign, but if there is anyone in the country capable of sustaining interest in the sweep the man is the veteran minister of the last Democratic administration.

The Whiskey and Tobacco Tax.

The tax on whiskey and tobacco, the former especially, should be retained. Taxation in some shape must continue, and there is no way by which large amounts of money can be raised more readily than by the tax in question. It is entirely a voluntary payment by the citizens, and he who does not use the whiskey has no tax to pay. The prohibitionist who expects to see the manufacture of it prohibited by law, as it is in some of the States, would not like to see the measure adopted as the permanent policy of the country, as he does not think the time has yet come for his doctrine to triumph. Wharton Barker, the prominent Independent leader of Philadelphia, who rarely proposes or does a good thing, makes a suggestion in this connection that is worthy of consideration. He proposes that the next Republican National Convention shall put a plank in its platform favoring the distribution of this tax, when no longer required by the general government, among the different States pro rata. This would make the States rich, and if the funds were applied to the cause of education would give us the best common school system in the world. The idea is not a new one, as one of the principles of the Whig party, inspired by Henry Clay, was to divide the proceeds of the sales of the public lands among the States. It ought to be a popular measure to carry before the people in the next national campaign, and although Mr. Barker is generally wrong in his movements, this one we think may be commended.

A MAN is known by the company he keeps, and the aphorism is equally applicable to a body of men or a political party. The Rhode Island Democrats desire to have William Sprague for Governor, and neither the outrageous proceedings at Canonchet, the remarkable divorce case, the peculiar features of the recent marriage, the much-muddled merchantile matters of Mr. Sprague, nor fact that the Stock Exchange has twice refused to admit him to its membership, appear to have a deterrent effect upon them or their confreres, the alleged Independents. Of course the Rhode Island Democrats know who and what will suitably represent them, and nobody envies them or covets the man of their choice.

THE Commissioner of Pensions expects to do pretty well this year in the matter of paying out pension money. He announces in an exasperatingly cheerful manner that the clerical machinery of his office is in such splendid working order now that he will not improbably be able to disburse as much as $100,000,000 during the current fiscal year. Mr. Dudley apparently supposes that this is intelligence which the public will be delighted to receive. If such be his idea, we are inclined to think that he somewhat exaggerates the popular magnanimity. The enormous disbursements over which he seems to gloat are not a pleasant subject with disinterested tax-payers.

The Trial of Dukes.

The jury system received a sad and most undeserved blow a short time ago, in Fayette county, remarks the Media American, when twelve Democratic jurymen acquitted Nicholas Lyman Dukes of all crime in shooting Captain Nutt, the father of a girl whom Dukes had seduced. The details of the crime are known to our readers, and the trial exposed nothing new save the correspondence between the seducer and the injured father. The latter sought to compel marriage, so as to save the honor of his daughter, while Dukes sought to escape by alleging illicit intimacy on the part of others—allegations which were flatly disproved on the trial, by the oaths of all the parties concerned, and some of them were personal and political friends of Dukes, and anxious to save his life. The letters of Dukes are simply horrible when addressed to a father almost crazed with threatened disgrace, while the intent to kill was proven by the purchase of the pistol after the father had been assured that if he met Dukes in his own room he would find him unarmed. The meeting, rather the scuffle which directly followed was witnessed by three persons, and after the combatants were separated, all the witnesses agreed that Capt. Nutt was leaning against the mantle and manifesting no intention to continue the fight. Yet while standing thus, Dukes shot him, and not until dying did he clutch at the pistol in his pocket.

So that, even admitting every doubt as to the murderous malice, there was grave crime in the act, and we believe there was at least murder in the second degree. But a jury so drawn that only partisan friends and Democrats could serve upon it, said not guilty as to all charges, on the alleged presumption that Dukes acted in self-defense.

There was nothing for the Court to do but discharge, but it accompanied the act with a mild expression of dissent from the verdict. Then Dukes had to place himself in charge of the Sheriff to prevent a possible lynching. Indignation meetings followed, and such is the popular feeling against the verdict that the second thought will turn our jury system. It should not save it as it applies to methods of drawing and challenge.

GEN'L BUTLER is now an admitted candidate for the Presidency, and is laying his wires throughout New England with a view to create an Independent party which may cooperate with his end of the Democracy. With this view he is running Sprague for Governor of Rhode Island, and the Butler Democrats are to accept him on their ticket, and if the scheme wins it is to be employed generally. Pennsylvania Independents will now more than ever regret the purpose to which their movement is being prostituted. To bend it to Bourbon Democratic aims was bad enough, but to have it swallowed by Ben. Butler is nauseous. But it won't be swallowed here, for the plain reason that the causes which called it into assertion are removed, and Republicans are as a rule united.

SENATOR MILLER, of California, is talked of in some quarters as a Republican Presidential candidate who could carry the doubtful Pacific states. He was born in West Virginia, went to school in Chicago, acquired his profession in New York and practiced it in California. The Boston Post says: "If he could carry all the states he lived in, the Republican party would find him its strongest candidate.

COLONEL INGERSOLL declares himself ready to go on with the Star Route trial until the last juryman has given up the ghost and his administrator has entered an appearance. We gather from this that the Colonel draws his fees pretty regularly.

A Letter from Harris Township.

We commend the following letter from Harris township to the attention of our readers in that vicinity, hoping that it may have the effect intended by the writer:

EDITOR REPUBLICAN: I observed in your issue of the 28th ult. that there was a mistake in the election returns of Harris District, and it is the desire of the people in general, that the error be corrected. The returns, as published, showed that Sam'l Ishler was elected Asst. Assessor and Sam'l. McClintock school director.

You will find however, by referring to the official returns, that such is not the case, but that Mr. McFarlane and J. S. Boal—Republicans—were chosen to fill the honorable stations to which the Democratic brethren were looking forward with longing and almost tearful eyes. The township is cursed by having a few individuals, that might aptly be called political tricksters, who are so anxious to have offices that if the Democratic party does not nominate them to the office they have been setting up the "pins" for, they will come to the Republican party and ask them to place their names upon their ticket—thinking that by the support of the Republican party, the influence of their personal friends, and by instigating and circulating false and disreputable reports to injure the reputation of those who are apparently in their way, that they can secure for themselves the little petty office in spite of fate. However, the Democrats are beginning to apprehend them, and we believe that they will, in the near future, do with the rest of them, as they did with some at the last election, viz: chuck them overboard.

Mr. "S. F. I.," who considered himself the leader of the Democratic party in Harris and who remarked a few days previous to the election, that "he carried the township in his vest pocket," is the gentleman who made such a flowing and eloquent speech in these words: "I will kindle a flame that will burn, that will burn!" and then suddenly sat down. Well, I presume he did kindle the flame, but it burned a hole in his vest pocket, and the township slipped out and left the poor fellow out in the cold and wet. Oh, the ungrateful and thoughtless people that cannot properly appreciate the services of such an important and distinguished gentleman. Bah—go away trouble.

The same party appear to think that the nomination of candidates by the Democrats of Harris is equivolent to an election, from the fact that one of them handed the names of the Democratic nominees of Harris to the Watchman for publication as the successful candidates on Monday previous to the election, which no doubt accounts for the error in the publication of the returns by that journal. But we did not expect the REPUBLICAN to be duped in that way.

SUBSCRIBER.

THERE seems to be a growing incredulity as to that remarkable story with which Lady Florence Dixie lately astonished the public. It is not charged that she evolved the thrilling tale from her inner consciousness, but it is strongly suspected that to some extent she drew upon her imagination for her facts. People are saying that it is very strange that two ruffians armed with daggers should have inflicted no more serious injury upon her ladyship's person, very strange that nothing should have been seen of them either before or after the attack, that they should have assumed a disguise so embarrassing and ineffective as the feminine costume, and that the dog by which they are said to have been repulsed should have escaped without a scratch. Evidently an investigation is in order.

LARGE exports and a prosperous year are predicted by careful trade journals.

The first piano was made at Padua, in Italy, in 1711, by Christifori. The first one seen in England was made by Father Wood, a monk, and very few were made there until after 1760.

It is mentioned as an interesting detail of the recent grand costume ball at Berlin that 10,200 wax candles, or 1,700 pounds of wax, were burned in the various chandeliers throughout the castle.

The famous old chestnut tree in the Tuileries garden known as "March 20," because it generally blossomed on that date, started out a month in advance this year, and all Paris rejoiced in the prospect of an early spring.

Chicago has 5,000 bars, or one to every 120 inhabitants, while there are not much more than twice that number of stores for the supply of food. Fifteen blocks, covering three-tenths of a square mile, contain 225 groggeries.

An Illinois court has given a depositor in a broken bank a verdict against the directors personally, the judge holding that they were responsible for money received after they knew of the bank's insolvency, as they did in this instance.

Isaac N. Solis inherited a quarter of a million, in Philadelphia, and lost many thousands of the money in gambling before he learned that the winners were cheaters. He has begun suits, not to recover the cash, but to punish the rascals.

"Away then," said Prof. Parish to the thirty-five young women to whom he was giving diplomas, as graduates of the Philadelphia Woman's Medical College, "with the fallacious reasoning that woman may with propriety devote her capabilities to the study of the lily or the rose, the spider or the beetle, but cannot study man, the noblest work of God."

The Speaker of the British House of Commons begins his Parliamentary dinners with the Cabinet always, and gradually gets through the whole House. These banquets must cost him at least $5,000. His salary is $25,000, with a splendid furnished abode adjoining the House. The Lord Chancellor, though Speaker of the Lords, does not officially feed them.

The number of applicants who presented themselves in New York in reply to a spurious advertisement created surprise. But the fact that in London, in reply to an advertisement in the Daily Telegraph for a clerk and bookkeeper, at a salary of $15 a week, no fewer than 1,950 responses were received at the postal department in that journal, created still greater surprise.

The French Ministry of Marine are having forty-six vessels constructed at the present moment, thirty-one in the Government dockyards and fifteen by private firms. Fourteen of these vessels are ironclads representing a value of 126,000,000 francs. Two, the Admiral Baudin and the Formidable, will cost 11,500,000 francs each. Eight others will cost each more than three-quarters of that sum.

A few days ago the attention of Mr. Martin Small, a farmer in the parish of Shapwick, in England, was called by his shepherd to one of the sheep, all along the back of which grass was springing up. It is conjectured that the animal, having been supplied with hay, had lain down on some of it, and the seeds, mixing with the wool, germinated through the sheep having been exposed to rain for a very long period.

A movement anticipatory of the battle of Dorking took place in England last month by the combined forces of Shorncliffe, Dover and Canterbury, upon the approach roads to Dover. The purpose was to test the practicability of protecting the mouth of the Channel Tunnel from the risk of sudden invasion, and every manœuvre had that result for its object. This demonstration will form a very important portion of the evidence to be given before the select committee on the tunnel scheme. The opinion of the officers at the conclusion of the strategic work was inimical to the tunnel.

BALLADE OF RHYME.

When blossoms born of balmy spring
Breathe fragrance in the pleasant shade
Of beauties where the blue birds sing,
Their hearts with music overweighed;
When brooks go babbling through the glade,
And over rocks the grasses climb
To greet the sunshine, half afraid—
How easy 'tis to write a rhyme.

When invitations are a-wing
For gay Terpsichore's parade;
When dreamy waltzes stir the string
And jewels flash on rich brocade,
Where Paris dresses are displayed,
And slippered feet keep careful time;
In winter, when the roses fade,
How easy 'tis to write a rhyme!

When by your side, with graceful swing,
Some fair-faced, gentle girl has strayed,
Willing and glad to have you bring
Your claims for love and get them paid
In kisses, smiles and words that aid
The bells of bliss to better chime;
When Cupid's rules are first obeyed,
How easy 'tis to write a rhyme.

ENVOY.

Reader, forgive me, man or maid,
Against Callispe this crime;
And let this brief ballade persuade
How easy 'tis to write a rhyme.

MIDNIGHT ODE TO E. STONE WIGGINS.

Athwart our Zone of Stars—America!
We watched and waited, Wiggins, dear, for thee,
And for thy whirlwind chariot to bear us,
With wild destruction to the sea.

But never beamed the stars more sweetly,
Than on the morn of thy prophetic day,
And dreamily the new-cut crescent, fleetly
Did kiss the ribbon'd clouds that fled away.

God works in manner most mysterious,
He balances the clouds, and He alone
Can bind Orion—sweetly still the tempest,
And bring to naught E. Wiggins, surnamed Stone!

We bury Wiggins now with Mother Shippen.
Like an Atlantic shipwrecked vessel, he
Adown the corridors of Time goes skippin';
O poor old Wiggins, too, too much at sea!

Poet Laureate of America.

Harrisburg, March 13.

A WELCOME.

Far in the sunny South she lingers,
Yet slowly coming along,
With fairy garlands in her fingers,
With snatches of sweet song.
Her eyes with promises are beaming,
Her smiles with rapture bring,
The sunlight from her hair is streaming,
Thrice welcome, lovely Spring!

She brings us gifts, the royal maiden,
Fair flowers to deck the hills;
With primroses her arms are laden,
Bluebells and daffodils.
Pale crocuses have come before her,
Wild birds her welcome sing;
Ten thousand longing hearts adore her—
The gray world's darling, Spring.

Our Story Teller.

THE CRANBERRY SWAMP;

And What Grew There.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"There's only one alternative left for me, that I can see," said Dr. Garland sternly, "and that is, to send her away."

Miss Keziah, his maiden sister, wiped her eyes mournfully.

"It'll be taking away the light of the house," said she.

"Well, but what is a man to do, when she will persist in falling in love with a ne'er-do-weel like Perry Vaughan? Am I to stand quietly by, and see her sacrifice herself?"

"It looks amazingly like it," groaned Dr. Garland. "Yes, yes, she must go out West to Cousin Caleb's."

"To Cousin Caleb's!" echoed Keziah, holding up both her white, skinny little hands. "Well, you might as well send her to the Rocky mountains at once, and done with it!"

"Not quite so bad as that, my dear," said Dr. Garland, disposing a red silk handkerchief around his head, preparatory to his usual post-prandial nap. "There are neither silver mines, bisons, nor red Indians in the immediate vicinity of Cousin Caleb's farm-house in Iowa. I know, for I've been there myself."

And when her brother had set his lips together after that decided fashion, Miss Keziah knew that there was no appeal. Poor little Edith's fate was sealed.

But Edith Garland, who was perhaps not so desperately in love as her over discriminating relatives imagined, thought the Carstoke farm-house "great fun," and Cousin Caleb and his wife "darling antediluvians." It was so nice to live out in the woods on the very verge of a huge old river, with owls hooting around them at night, and even a stray wolf or so in the thickets up the hill-side. And Edith kept a journal and sketched, and enjoyed herself to the very top of her eighteen year old bent.

As for Mr. and Mrs. Carstoke, Edith was like a glimmer of sunshine in the gray solitary monotone of their every-day existence. She was such a cherry-cheeked, bright-eyed graceful little creature, and took so naturally to her new life. It gave the old man a new sensation when first Edith put her arms round his neck, and gave him just such a hug and kiss as she had been wont to bestow upon her hard-hearted papa; and as for Mrs. Carstoke, she could hardly bear to have the pretty little city damsel out of her sight for a moment.

But the fate which Edith had fled, in the shape of Perry Vaughan, was destined to follow her even into the wilderness of the West. Dr. Garland could hedge his pretty daughter round with a cordon of precautions and restrictions, but he could not evade the little winged god with the bows and arrows.

For Edith, out one orange-tinted October twilight, to sketch the lightning-blasted old tree with the hawk's nest in its topmost branches, which stood in the middle of a cranberry swamp, somehow missed the right path in returning home, and fairly lost herself, like a grown-up babe in the wood.

Not being one of the preternaturally courageous females that we read of, and seeing no immediate way out of the dilemma, Edith very naturally and ignominiously sat down on a fallen tree to cry. Suppose a wolf should come down from the leafless hill-side and eat her up? Suppose a rattlesnake should wreathe itself hissingly round the twisted roots of the gnarled old forest favorites? Suppose—And just then Harry Sepley came into the clearing with a gun on his shoulder and a game bag slung picturesquely at his belt.

A very handsome young man is certainly an improvement on a wolf or a rattlesnake. Edith Garland stopped crying at once, and answered radiantly to Mr. Sepley's concerned questions.

"Oh, I thought I was lost! But I'm not afraid any more now."

They went cranberrying together afterward, in the same old swamp, and came home to the Carstoke farm house with baskets brimming with rubied fruit, and bones sore and wearied out, but happy as crowned potentates.

"Why don't you cut down that old dead tree, Caleb?" said Edith, "the one with the hawk's nest on the top."

"Because, child," said Cousin Caleb, "I've sort o' fancy for that old dead tree. It's old, and so am I and 'tan't likely we'll either of us hold our own very long."

"Aha!" said Edith archly; "so you are a little bit romantic after all, Cousin Caleb." The dismay of Dr. Garland may be imagined, when his pretty daughter came home engaged to be married to a young westerner, who was even more penniless and good-looking, if possible, that the doomed Perry Vaughan.

"There!" cried Miss Keziah. "I told you so. One's fate would follow one, even into the Cranberry swamp of the West!"

"If she marries that fellow," cried Dr. Garland, slinging his spectacles across the floor, "I'll disinherit her."

"You'd never be such an unnatural brute!" exclaimed Miss Keziah, with more partisanship than prudence.

"Wouldn't I though!" ground out the testy old gentleman between his clenched teeth. "I'll let you see whether I will or not!"

Edith remained staunch to her lover, and Dr. Garland stuck like a limpet to his word; so that Harry Sepley, though he got a fortune in his wife, got nothing with her, except the old set of tarnished pearls that Aunt Keziah contrived to smuggle into the bride's one little trunk.

"Never mind," wrote Cousin Caleb Carstoke, from the far west, when he heard of the turn matters had taken. "I'll see that little Edith is provided for."

Here was a gleam of hope for the impecunious young people, in the future at least; and so they struggled happily and bravely along, living on Sepley's slender salary as book-keeper, as best they might, until one day came the news that Caleb Carstoke was dead. And in his will he had left to his dearly beloved cousin, Edith Sepley, the cranberry swamp, with all its appurtenance and belongings.

And that was all. The old farm-house, it appeared, was mortgaged to its full value; the lots of tillable land had been sold off one by one; all had vanished away, save the old swamp.

"What shall we do?" Edith asked, looking a little blank. "We have come into our fortune at last, but our fortune don't seem to be a very brilliant one. And the children—and—"

"I'll tell you what we will do," said hopeful Harry. "We'll go out west and raise cranberries for the market."

"But where shall we live? In the hawk's nest, on the hollow tree?" asked Edith, somewhat bitterly. Harry came and sat down by her side.

"My little wife is not going to be discouraged as easily as all this!" he said, caressingly stroking down her bright, black tresses. "We will drain a bit of the land, and cut down the old dead tree and build a little cottage just on the site of the spot where I stood when I first saw you crying in the twilight, with a red shawl wrapped round you, little Red Riding Hood, afraid of the possible wolf! And our babies will grow up all the stronger and better for free air and country breezes, and we will prosper on Cousin Caleb's bequest after all."

"So we will," said Edith, brightening up. "Oh, Harry, I never ought to lose heart and hope, so long as I have you and the little ones."

The stout hearted young couple went west accordingly, with the three chubby-cheeked little rogues whom God had given them.

"They'll get sick of it, and be glad to come back and eat humble pie," said Dr. Garland vindictively. "I'm willing to take Edith and the children, if she will confess she has made a fool of herself; but I won't have Sepley."

"Then you may make up your mind never to have Edith," said Aunt Keziah, who knew the labyrinths of a woman's heart better than did her brother. "Edith loves her husband, and she'll stick by him to the last."

"Then let her starve it out!" said the old gentleman, with a very unprofessional expletive, by way of finish to the sentence. "She'll be glad to come to me yet, on her bended knees!"

Harry Sepley went bravely to work in the dreary fastnesses of the cranberry swamp, and Edith and the children watched afar off, and clapped their hands gleefully, when with a crashing, splintering sound, like the mainmast of a three decker, the old lightning blasted tree went down. And then commenced the task, by no means a light one, of draining the slope of land and digging the foundations of the new house.

The cellar was nearly completed; the working men had bundled together their tools, for it chanced to be Saturday night, and gone home and little Hal and Eddie were busy with their trowels, digging where the men had been. Harry Sepley had come in wearied out, and his wife was welcoming him with a bright smile, when Arty, the youngest of the flock, toddled breathlessly up to the door.

"Mamma! mamma!" he cried, with his big blue eyes as round as marbles. "Hal has found a pot of money!"

"Nonsense, child," said Edith; "run away, and don't tell such improbable stories."

"But, mamma," persisted the little fellow, "he has! Come and see! A yellow pot, full of yellow money!"

"What can he mean?" said Harry Sepley to his wife.

"Let us go and see," said Edith; and although neither spoke more, yet both remembered how fond Caleb Carstoke had been of the old dead tree, crested by the hawk's nest, and both began to fancy that a new meaning might be attached to the old man's strange bequest of the apparently worthless cranberry swamp.

The children were right. Little Hal, digging vigorously away with his trowel, had hit against an old yellow earthenware crock; which had proved to be full of old fashioned gold coins, the hoarded wealth of Caleb Carstoke's life? And in a discolored paper, wedged against the lid, they read what convinced them that he meant to have acquainted them with this hidden store, had not death anticipated the revelation, and silenced him forever. And thus, by the merest chance, they had "come into their fortune," when the old man had lain for years in his grave.

"Harry," said Edith, "we are rich now. What shall we do?"

"Stay here," said Harry bravely, "and live the most independent life in all the world. We'll buy back the old farm house, and rear our children by the riverside, and keep the cranberry swamp just as it is. But, thank God, we are freed from the curse of poverty at last!"

And they never journeyed eastward again.

What Tripe Is.

Burlington Hawkeye.

Occasionally you see a man order tripe at a hotel, but he always looks hard, as though he hated himself and everybody else. He tries to look as though he enjoyed it, but he does not. Tripe is indigestible, and looks like an India rubber apron for a child to sit on. When it is pickled it looks like dirty clothes put to soak, and when it is cooking it looks as though the cook was boiling a dishcloth. On the table it looks like glue, and tastes like a piece of oil silk umbrella cover. A stomach that is not lined with corrugated iron would be turned wrong side out by the smell of tripe. A man eating tripe at a hotel table looks like an Arctic explorer dining on his boots or chewing pieces of frozen raw dog. You cannot look at a man eating tripe but he will blush and look as though he wanted to apologize and convince you he is taking it to tone up his system. A woman never eats tripe. There is not money enough in the world to hire a woman to take a corner of a sheet of tripe in her teeth and try to to pull off a piece. Those who eat tripe are men who have had their stomach's play mean tricks on them, and they eat tripe to get even with their stomach and then they go and take a Turkish bath to sweat it out of the system. Tripe is a superstition handed down from a former generation of butchers who sold all the meat and kept the tripe for themselves and the dogs; but the dogs of the present day will not eat tripe. You throw a piece of tripe down in front of a dog and see if he does not put his tail between his legs and go off and hate you. Tripe may have a value, but it is not as food. It may be good to file into a burglar proof safe, with the cement and chilled steel, or it might answer to use as a breast plate in time of war, or it would be good to use for bumpers, between cars, or it would make a good face for the weight of a pile driver, but when you come to smuggle it into the stomach you do wrong. Tripe? Bah! A piece of Turkish towel cooked in axle grease would be pie compared with tripe.

A Rare Instance.

"Father," began a Cass avenue lad the other night, "is Mr. T. a good man?"

"Yes, my son. I regard him as one of the best men in Michigan."

"Do you believe he would lie?"

"What, young man! are you crazy? Why, sir, Mr. T. would not tell a lie for all the gold on earth. What makes you ask that question?"

"Why, when a man says he saw a spring robin on the 15th day of February what do you call it?"

"Did he say he saw one?"

"He did."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh! I heard him tell three different men so. Didn't he lie, father?"

"N-n o, I think not," mused the father; "but let it be a great moral lesson to you all the same. It isn't once in a thousand years that a robin comes up here from Tennessee at that date and exhibits himself to a single citizen and returns on the afternoon express."—Detroit Free Press.

A Frightful Collision.

From the Chicago Times.

The railroad reporter, with a map spread before him, was busily engaged building the last link of a road which was to connect the X. Y. W. and the G. O. H. roads, forming a grand trunk line between the important points of A. and Z., the local traffic of which would pay operating expenses, five per cent. quarterly dividends, with an occasional script issue to holders of preferred paper. While thus engaged, the society editor turned in his chair, pulled down his corsage and said:

"Are you much of a ladies man?"

"Me? Yes, I am; and always on time, although I may not like it," said the railroad reporter very calmly. "At one time I was a regular standard-gauge, steel-rail, stone-ballaster swell, but of late years I have uncoupled from that sort of business and have been running a direct line."

"Do you think you could relieve me to-night of a recherche affair among the creme de la creme, and do justice to the tout en semble at the soiree?"

"I think I can, if there's time to make the transfer without missing connections."

"You'll be on time to witness the denouement. It's the marriage of Colonel D'Oille's daughter. Pay strict attention to the bride's costume and write up a detailed description of it."

The railroad reporter took up his linen duster from the bottom of his escritoire, borrowed a chew of tobacco from the political reporter, and started for the residence of Colonel D'Oille. Among the wedding notices the next morning was the following:

"Last night a large number of high joints blockaded the residence of Colonel D'Oille to witness the marriage of his lovely daughter, Jeanne Baptiste, to the Hon John Quincy Jeems, Jr. Col. D'Oille was general manager of the entire guest system, and had his headquarters established in the dining room, and only left his post and the sideboard, where the gentlemen were frequently sidetracked for repairs, to go the parlors on a trip of inspection. Mrs. Col. D'Oille acted as commissioner of the guest pool and superintendent of the dining service, and spent the most of her time fixing the divisions of the supper courses and seeing them forwarded to destinations on schedule time. It was in fact a Miller-platform, Westinghouse-brake, paper cart wheel occasion. Just before the arrival of the reverend conductor who was to pull the bell cord of the matrimonial train, Colonel D'Oille left the side board and started up grade with a heavy load, and in consequence slipped an eccentric and come into the parlor running on one side, but was flagged down in time to prevent his jamming his head light through a bay window. The Colonel in stopping to fill his tank too often, lost right of way and did not witness the ceremony.

The bride, a slender beauty, was dressed in a flowing robe de chambre of yellow tinted bobinet muslin a la ecru, looped up at the sides with a Hungarian pompadour of blue grenadine and of fichus of Queen Anne gimp. The dress was cut on an incline of forty-eight degrees across the shoulder and curved around under the left arm. The bosom of the fair bride was surmounted with a trestle-work of Louis XVI, and her waist was surfaced up and filled in with artificial flowers made attractive by several narrow guage short lines of red trimming, which skirted around and centered at a common terminal point on the crest of her polonaise. Down the front of the robe was a midland route of antique buff serge, intersected by numerous feeders of costly fex merino. The new agreement was successfully consummated, and the first annual report will be awaited with interest."

Dressing for Comfort.

Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

I went to Montreal to see the carnival of snow and ice, and learned a number of things that came within the line of woman's fashions. I wore thick stockings, thick shoes, rubbers, my sealskin dolman, and carried a Cardigan jacket as an extra precaution. I went up with a drawing-room car load of women, none of whom I judged to be so warmly dressed as I was. After breakfast I was driven in one of those grand carriolets that are the only kind of sleighs seen in Montreal, except the tub sleighs, that suddenly are the rage on Fifth avenue. The carriolet has a low body behind a high driving seat. The driver wears bearskin, a bearskin robe falls from the seat where you sit, another robe covers your lap, and yet another falls from the edge of the back seat to the runners. The air was intensely cold, below zero, but dry and still, and the bright sun lured me on. I wore a small feather bonnet. Presently I felt as if my brain was congealed I rubbed it, and the cold went through gloves and numbed my hands. Once on the river—a sea of ice that appeared to stretch away to the North Pole—I got out of the sleigh to walk about and get warm. Then the cold nipped my ankles, and gradually worked its way all over me, so that I fled back to the hotel again and hugged a stove in the parlor. I received a call from a Montreal girl, daughter of a member of Parliament, whom I had met three years in succession at Newport. I told her I was afraid I should have to go home without ever seeing the ice palace. She asked me what clothes I had, and I told her everything, down to my rubbers. "Good land!" said she, "did you think this was New Orleans? You must double up in nearly every thing. Put on two suits of flannels from your neck to your heels. I'll bring you a quilted petticoat and some half inch thick worsted overshoes to draw on over your shoes, and then you must buy a fur cap and a pair of the heavy cloth arcties that you'll find in the stores. Put on all the skirts you've brought, in addition to the silk petticoat that I'll bring you. Then you'll want a silk neckerchief—you can get one as big as a tablecloth for $1.50—and a chamois jacked and fur lined gloves. Oh, your feet and hands will be as big as hams, but you'll die if you don't keep them warm. Even then you won't be up to our girls, for we start late in October and eat the fattest mutton, pork sausages, ducks and geese, and griddle cakes and molasses, and keep up that diet all winter, so that we have an armor of fat that's half the battle against the cold." I went home with her, and had to buy nothing but a fur cap. All the rest she furnished, and I have just expressed back to her a small trunk full of things that I wore there all at once. I forgot one thing—a worsted comforter. After you are all dressed, and feel as if you could not breathe, and hadn't the strength or the room under your clothes to drag one leg after the other, you take a worsted comforter about three yards long and bend it down over the top of your cap, down alongside of your ears, around and around your neck, across your breast and around your waist. Dressed that way, I felt like a small article in a bundle say (if you will allow me to flatter myself) something like a diamond in a box of cotton batting with the lid right. But I was warm.

I've often boasted that I never perspire, but I did that first day, like a pitcher full of ice water. And the thermometer was 6 below when I did it. I looked like a dowdy Esquimaux, as you may imagine, and it did not reconcile me when I saw thousands of girls dressed the same way. It was only when I spied, now and then, a party of New York women in furs, with their teeth chattering, their bodies trembling, and tears starting from their eyes all from the cold, that I began to really enjoy myself.

A Story of the Great Smoker.

I met a man the other day called "Soldier Sam," an honest fellow, and one of the true blue boys of the late war. He had served under Grant and could tell reminiscences of the great General by the hour. The best of it was that his stories were always authentic. I remember, said he, that while we were on the Mississippi a big barge loaded with bombs and gunpowder was lying alongside the wharf. Grant had given orders that no one should smoke on board that barge. I suppose the old tub had thousands of dollars' worth of powder under her decks. So the corporal set a guard there and ordered him to shoot the first man who should cross the plank with a lighted pipe or cigar. Well, when the word got abroad we kept away, for we knew that the order meant business. One day, when I was off duty, General Grant rode up on his horse. He wore a big blouse and a slouch hat. He had no star, no side arms. We all knew him without the aid of trinkets.

"Is that the powder boat?" he asked.

I told him it was.

He looked at me sharply over a hot cigar, and said: "I'll go on board then."

I knew he'd never take that cigar out of his mouth, except to eat or sleep, so I said.

"General, if you walk across that plank smoking, the sentry will shoot you."

He saw that I was in earnest, but he said:

"Don't you suppose he knows me?"

"Of course he does, General," I replied. "But he's been ordered to shoot the first man caught smoking on that barge, and he'll do it. That's the kind of chap he is."

Grant looked rather amused. I reckon he never intended to go near the old barge. He just wheeled his horse about and away he went.

That evening I told the sentry all about the talk. The next morning he and the corporal were ordered up to the General's headquarters. The sentry was a black man; but when he heard that Grant wanted to see him he was rather white. He went up.

"Can you read?" asked Grant.

"No, sah; I nebber had no chance to l'a'n."

"Do you always know me when you see me?"

"Yes, sah."

"Suppose I had gone on board that powder boat with a lighted cigar, what would you have done?"

"Shot you, sah."

"But I am your general?" exclaimed Grant.

"Yes, sah; and we jes' obeys yo' orders," said the sentry.

Grant looked the men all over. The corporal was trembling, and the sentry was actually pale; but both were as firm as rocks. At last the general relaxed.

"Well, sir," he said to the negro, "we'll make you a corporal; and this other man shall be a sergeant. I promote these men!"

"I tell you we didn't forget that," said Soldier Sam.

A Tenderfoot at Tombstone.

How a Little Question in Grammar was Settled Within Three Minutes.

From the Middletown Transcript.

A few days ago a flash young man from an Eastern college arrived at Tombstone, Arizona, and registered his name at the principal hotel. A socially inclined person in a blue shirt and a wide-rimmed hat, who chanced to be in the office, good-naturedly answered every question and volunteered a vast amount of interesting information about Arizona in general and Tombstone in particular.

"Do you see them hills?" asked the Tombstoner, pointing through one of the office windows. "Well, them hills is chock full of pay dirt."

The young man from the East looked shocked.

"My dear sir," he said, proudly, but kindly, "you should say those hills are—not, "them hills is!"

The Tombstoner was silent for a moment. He looked the young man from the East critically over as if he was estimating the size of coffin he would wear. Then drawing out an ivory-stocked seven-shooter of elaborate style and finish, he said in a soft, mild, musical tone of voice that sounded like a wildwood brook coursing o'er its pebble bed: "My gentle, unsalted tenderfoot from the land of the rising sun, this here's a pint that you and me disagrees on and we might as well have it settled right now. I haven't looked in a grammar lately, but I say 'them hills is' is correct, and I'm going to stand by that opinion while I've got a shot left. I'll give you just three minutes to think calmly over the subject, for you probably spoke in haste the first time, and then I'll hear your decision."

The young man from the East looked down the delicately-chased barrel of the revolver into the placid depths of the eye of the Tombstoner and began to feel that many points in grammar are uncertain and liable to grow more so. Then he thought of the coroner's inquest and of the verdict, "Came to his death by standing in front of Colorado Tom's seven shooter," and the long pine box going East by express with $69 charges on it, and before half the three minutes was up he was ready to acknowledge his error. "Since he had thought it over calmly," he said, "he believed that 'them hills is,' is right. He had spoken on the spur of the moment," he added, "and begged a thousand pardons for his presumptuous effort to substitute bad grammar for good."

The Tombstoner forgave him freely, and, grasping his hand, said:

"I know'd you'd say you was wrong after you thought a moment. I admire a man who gives right in without arguing when he know's he's wrong. Come along and irrigate." And they irrigated.

A Strange Intimation.

New York Tribune.

On the morning of the day before his death, it is said, the late Marshall Jewell awoke from a sound sleep and at once asked what was the matter at the home of William E. Dodge.

A telegram had just been received by Mr. Jewell's family, announcing the death of Mr. Dodge, but it was not thought best to let Mr. Jewell know it, so he was told that all was well there. He would not believe them. Something had happened, he said; some great affliction had overtaken the family. Insisting upon this, and refusing to accept his family's denials, he at length induced them to telegraph to New York to see what was the matter.

But Mrs. Jewell so worded the telegram as to instruct those who received it to answer that everything was all right. When that answer came, they told Mr. Jewell, who refused to believe it, and asked to see the message itself. This request being granted, and having the occular proof before his eyes, in the shape of an unmistakable telegraph message, he dubiously remarked:

"Well, it does seem to be so; but it is very strange; I know there is something the matter, that something serious has happened in Mr. Dodge's house in New York." And that impression he retained until, soon afterward he, too, ended his earthly life.

A Remarkable Woman.

Dr. Abernethy, the celebrated physician, was never more displeased than by hearing a patient detail a long account of troubles. A woman knowing Abernethy's love of the laconic, having burned her hand called at his house. Showing him her hand she said. "A burn."

"A poultice," quietly answered the learned doctor.

The next day she returned, and said, "Better."

"Continue the poultice," replied Dr. Abernethy.

In a week she made her last call, and her speech was lengthened to three words: "Well, your fee?"

"Nothing," said the physician. 'You are the most sensible woman I ever saw."

The Largest Natural Fountain.

Silver Spring, in Georgia, is the largest natural fountain in the world, being the source of the Oklawaha river, which is 60 feet wide, 10 feet deep and flows at the rate of two miles an hour from the start. The spring covers an area of a little more than two acres. The legend of the spring is that Wenonah, the beauty of the tribe that inhabitated the neighborhood, won the love of Chullootah, a hostile chief. Her wrathful father slew the lover, and then Wenonah drowned herself in the spring, which was then small, but was instantly enlarged to its present proportions by the Great Spirit's abundant tears of sympathy.

THE HOUSE WITH CLOSETS.

How dear to the heart of the house-keeping woman,
Are comforts of which so few architects tell;
Nice children, good servants, and plenty of room in
The well-fitted mansion in which they must dwell.
But first of the blessings kind fortune can give her,
If she in the city or country abide,
Is that which she longs for and covets forever,
The big, airy closet, her joy and her pride!
The roomy, clean closet, the well-ordered closet,
The big, airy closet, her joy and her pride!

The house may be perfect from garret to cellar,
Well lighted, well aired, with cold water and hot,
And yet, to the eye of the feminine dweller,
If closetless, all is as if it were not.
How oft she has sunk like the dove that was wounded,
How oft she has secretly grumbled and sighed,
Because she saw not, though with all else surrounded,
The big, airy closet, her joy and her pride!
The roomy, clean closet, the well ordered closet,
The big, airy closet, her joy and her pride!

Fond husbands, who fain would have home be an eden,
For you and yours ever all complete as a whole,
To read in, to write in, to sleep in, to feed in,
Forget not the closets so dear to the soul:
But build them in closets, in crooks and in crannies,
Wherever a closet may harbor or hide,
And give to your Sallies, your Kates and your Annies,
The big, airy closets, their joy and their pride!
The roomy, clean closets, the big, airy closets,
The big, airy closets, their joy and their pride!

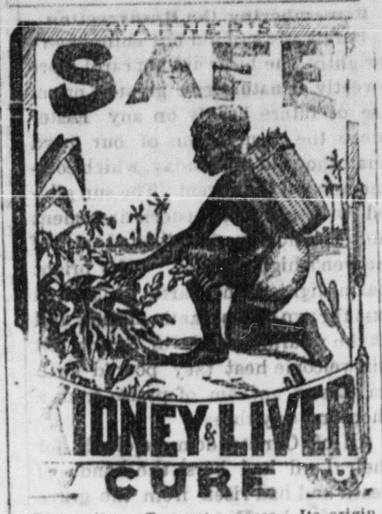
Medical.



Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations are without. Hence, to cure the disease the Cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure be effected. WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE is established on just principles. It realizes that of all diseases arise from deranged kidneys and liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for Malaria, and for physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of imposters, imitations and connections said to be just as good.

For Diabetes, ask for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. For sale by all dealers.

SEEK

health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN' IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

JOHN K. ALLENDER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is composed of Iron in soluble form; Cinchona the great tonic, together with other standard remedies, making a remarkable non-alcoholic tonic, which will cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Malaria, Weakness, and relieve all Lung and Kidney diseases.

HERE AT LAST.

After Long and Weary Waiting Relief is Brought to Those Who Need it.

"Well Pat," said an Orange county physician to a complaining Irishman some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when it is too late for me to use it."

When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, its rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days for all affections to which a plaster is applicable. Price, 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

LATEST TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

Ejecting a Countess.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—The aristocratic guests at the Hotel Lafayette were agitated to-day over a somewhat unusual incident—the forcible ejection of a Countess for non-payment of board and other reasons. When the Countess came to the Hotel Lafayette about six months ago, registering from Paris, she was alone. Since then the hotel has changed proprietors, and when Mr. Maltby took charge, his predecessor told him that he left him the Countess as a legacy, which might or might not prove advantageous. She called herself simply Mme. Emile Racouska, but informed nearly everybody that she was a Polish Countess, and her accomplishments, imperious conduct and eccentricity here contributed to make her claim accepted. She speaks English very well, and French and German correctly, and is married. An English lady, named Mrs. Masten, who came to the hotel a few months ago, and has been under the protection of the Countess, says that the madame was a veritable Countess, and she had known her abroad.

Mr. Maltby asserts that since she came into the hotel she has not paid any board. She made herself very objectionable to the other guests. He says: "She was in the habit of going into the rooms of other guests unannounced, much to their discomfiture, and remaining until she felt inclined to go. Nearly every one was afraid of her. She terrorized the waiters, desired a table to herself, made it unpleasant for the people around her in the drawing room, and conducted herself in such a way that she drove other people from the place. I consulted District Attorney Graham and found I could not prosecute her criminally, but received legal advice to secure the services of two constables and eject her from the house, which I did. This afternoon we went to her room and I presented the bill, and upon her refusal to pay demanded possession of the room. The constables, after long persuasion, prevailed upon her to leave the hotel with them without violence."

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—The sequel to the expulsion of the Countess Racousky from the Lafayette Hotel on Wednesday came to-day in the shape of three suits against the hotel manager, L. U. Maltby. The first was a capias for a trespass vi et armis, in support of which was filed an affidavit, signed "Amelia De Racousky," wherein the Countess charged Mr. Maltby with having perpetrated an assault upon her on the 4th of January last by requesting that she would leave her door open at night, in order that he might enter, at the same time laying hands upon her with an evidently amorous intent. She repelled his advances and denounced him in fitting terms. The second writ charges the defendant with malicious slander, in having said to her: "The ladies of the hotel are complaining of your conduct. You have been in the room of the gentleman next to you at night." The third suit is an ordinary summons for the recovery of damages for the alleged illegal eviction.

The damages which the Countess can claim in these suits will be compensation for her outraged feelings in the first, for the injury to her reputation and good name in the second and for the indignity put upon her in the third. Mme. Racousky says she refused to have any communication with Maltby after the assault, and he endeavored by many petty annoyances to compel her to leave the house. Instead of sending her bills up by a clerk, as had formerly been the practice, he brought them up himself, and she refused to pay them or even to have anything to say to him. She was entirely able to pay, but would not submit to be charged for extras which she did not get. In this way the bills had accrued for four weeks. She was not expelled in a quiet way, as has been stated. On the contrary, as she walked into the hotel elevator a call boy cried. "There she goes," and immediately two constables rushed up, seized her by the arm and ran her out into the street. Her conduct has always been entirely proper and ladylike, and she was able and willing to pay all she owed.

Floods and Freshets.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 23.—Latest reports from throughout the country give statements of widespread inundation and disaster by the freshets. The Halifax and Cape Brenton railway has been seriously washed out near Antigonish. The bridges at West River and in other parts of Pictou county are gone. The Western Shore stage, due here at 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, did not arrive until ten minutes past 11 o'clock yesterday morning, owing to the bridges being broken and impassable in the dark. A telegram from Sherbrook states that the town is flooded and that some buildings had been swept away, while the people had moved to the upper stories of their dwellings. All mining has ceased and all small bridges have been carried away.

A telegram from Cumberland today says: "There have been great damage and loss of property on Wallace river. Teed's, Stephens' and Kerr's mill bridges are all destoyed. The Howard mill was destroyed and the bridge damaged Seaman, Bluder & Wood's saw mill was carried down the river two miles. The Maccan bridge on the Spring Hill and Parrsborough railway was washed out by the the freshet and in consequence traffic is suspended. The Eastern Extension railway suffered severely. About one hundred feet of track was washed away at Barry river. The trestle bridge, crossing an interval at Antigonish, 500 feet long, will be considerably damaged. Washouts are reported at Pouquet, Tracadie and Afton, and great damage has been done to fences, small bridges, &c.

A Revolutionist Cremated.

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 23.—The veteran fireman, John L. Dye, who built the Lemoyne crematory, lighted the fires Wednesday morning preparatory to the cremation of the remains of Charles Soehner, of Indianapolis. Upon the death of that gentleman which occurred on Tuesday, arrangements were immediately perfected for the cremation of the body. Mr. Soehner had accompanied the remains of Dr. Somberg to this place when they were reduced in the spring of 1881, and he was then favorably impressed with the mode of disposing of the dead. The remains were lifted from the casket, and after being wrapped in the usual way and laid in the crib, were said quickly into the retort and the door closed. In less than two hours the body was successfully reduced. Deceased was a prominent revolutionist in 1849, and left Germany to settle in Indianapolis. He leaves a son and three daughters, all married. He was 65 years of age.

Keighley's Victim still Alive.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 22.—John Kane, the Molly Maguire shot by Superintendent Keighley, of the Youngstown coke works, yesterday evening is still alive, though he cannot survive much longer. His wonderful hold on life astonishes everyone. He has four 38 calibre balls in his body, two of them in his abdomen and two in the breast, one being in the right lung. His physicians think he can live at most only a few hours. He persists that he did not intend to harm Keighley. No pistol was found on his person. His friends are up in arms. Keighley remains in the sheriff's office, no information having been made against him, Buck Collins, Kane's Molly Maguire companion, is now under arrest. He swears he will put a bullet through Keighley's heart.

Held in $2,000 for Murder.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 20.—A few days ago Jerome Shoemaker assisted under protest the sheriff of Montague county in arresting a hard character named James Savage. On Saturday last Savage met Shoemaker at Burlington and shot and killed him. Sol. Ritchie, a friend of Shoemaker, attacked Savage with a knife whereupon the latter put two balls through him killing him almost instantly. Savage was arrested but was released on $2,000 bail.

Secretary Folger's Condition.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Secretary Folger's physician reports at a late hour to-night that the condition of his patient is much improved. The secretary is now suffering from erysipelas in the face and head brought on by a severe cold. The disease is aggravated by lowered vitality and an impoverished condition of the blood, due to overwork and imperfect nutrition, but it is not thought that there is any reason for especial apprehension

Riddled with Bullets.

DENVER, March 23.—At daybreak yesterday, in Lake valley, Major Fountain's command surprised two notorious rustlers, Jack Walls and William Gillard, who arrived at the camp while the soldiers were unsaddling, and made a break for liberty. They had two hundred yards' start, when Fountain ordered the men to fire. Both rustlers fell dead, riddled with bullets.

Cast up by the Sea.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 25.—At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a three-masted schooner, in ballast, the Samuel Gilman, of Boston, Captain Nickerson, was see to go ashore at Straitsmouth Point, off Rockport. The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and a tremendous sea was running. She struck hard and fast, and lay in such a position that the heavy seas made a clean breach over her. A crowd gathered upon the beach and watched the ill-fated vessel. The crew could be plainly seen clinging to the rigging and making such signals as they could to attract attention to their perilous position. The lifeboat was got ready for launching, but the undertow was so heavy that the men did not dare to venture out. At times the great waves would dash on the vessel with such force that it seemed impossible that the suffering sailors could retain their hold. They clung fast, however, and each receding wave showed them still grasping the icy ropes. The air was freezing cold and the chill wind sent a shiver through the frames of the dry and warmly clad spectators on the beach. The sufferings of the wrecked sailors, wet to the skin and clinging to the frozen ropes with numbed fingers, was intense. For hours they hung there, in full sight of the crowd upon the shore, but without a hope of rescue until the gale should abate. Late in the afternoon, an unusually heavy sea lifted the schooner from the position which she had hitherto occupied, and raising her up drove her further up the shore in comparatively shoal water, and so far in upon the beach that the men managed, with great difficulty, to make their painful way ashore one after another. As the last one left the rigging and was seen safe on the island a great shout went up from the crowd of anxious lookers-on, rejoicing at their escape. Straitsmouth island, where the men now are, is about four miles from the main land.

Death of Hon. T. O. Howe.

KENASHA, Wis., March 25.—Hon. T. O. Howe, postmaster general, died at 2 o'clock this afternoon, at the residence of his nephew, Col. James H. Howe. He contracted a severe cold a week ago at Green Bay and returned to Kenasha. He was very ill till Saturday when he seemed to improve. His physicians pronounced his ailment pneumonia. He was taken worse on Saturday night and sank rapidly, passing away peacefully this afternoon.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The president received to-night telegraphic information of the sudden death this afternoon at his home in Wisconsin of Postmaster General Howe. In consequence of this sad and unexpected event the dinner which was to be given to ex-President Diaz, who will arrive in Washington on Monday morning as the guest of the nation, will not take place. The reception to have been given to the same distinguished guest by Secretary Frelinghuysen on Wednesday evening will not take place.

A Physician's Fatal Error.

NEW YORK, March 25.—John M. Scherer, the 8-year-old son of Captain Jacob Scherer, died in St. John's Home, Brooklyn, on March 3 and his body was taken to the home of the parents in Greenport, Long Island, from which the funeral took place. The attendant physician gave croup as the cause of death, and the body was left in the house for a week to await the return of the father. The day after the funeral one of the children was taken with malignant scarlet fever, and soon after the other three children were afflicted in the same way. These were followed by three children of Mrs. Archer, Captain Scherer's sister, and two days afterward the entire family was taken down. Since then others have been taken ill with scarlet fever, all growing out of the ignorance of the physician who pronounced the first case croup.

A Wedding Postponed.

BALTIMORE, March 23.—Miss Jennie Herman, daughter of Mr. Jacob Herman, was to have been married Wednesday evening to Mr. Charles Beckman at her father's residence, 324 East Baltimore street. When the guests arrived they found the residence of the Hermans closed, and that the wedding had been postponed. The Hermans are wealthy, and the girl is a belle among the Germans of East Baltimore. Beckman broached the subject of dower, but the father refused to do more than start the groom in business with $5,000 worth of stock. Beckman wanted $10,000 cash, and Herman would not give it.

The Queen Better.

LONDON, March 22.—The condition of Queen Victoria's limb, which was injured by her fall on Saturday last, continues most satisfactory. Her Majesty keeps her rooms in obedience to the advice of her physicians. She is, however, able to move about. The swelling of the knee is subsiding, and it is hoped by the physicians in attendance that it will disappear entirely within a few days. There has at no time been any grounds for the excitement over the matter which it seems has been created in New York, but which has not prevailed here. The matter creates very little comment in London.

Remembering the Resurrection.

Surely the sun did not shine more brightly, the birds did not carol more sweetly or nature give greater promise of future beauty on any Easter since the resurrection of our Lord than they did on Sunday, which commemorated that event. The sun gilded with glory the eastern firmament and gradually illuminated all of heaven's high archway. His bright beams lighted the earth which had just thrown off its mantle of snow, and as the returning birds of Spring felt his welcome heat they poured forth an Easter anthem of praise from a thousand tiny throats.

All of Christendom rejoiced, for their Lord had burst the bonds of death and had risen from the grave to comfort by His presence the sorrowful hearts of His disciples before His final ascension to heaven, and to give a seal to His redemptive work. The churches of Bellefonte remembered the day with appropriate religious observances, which consisted of profuse floral decorations and joyful music.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

This church commemorated the resurrection with perhaps more elaborate and beautiful services than ever before. The spirit displayed in contributing the flowers was surely one which would make the action one of devout worship. Those persons interested in the several memorials of the church, by which they hold dear the memory of departed friends, were invited to provide the proper floral emblems to be placed near them. The young ladies of the church took charge of the general decorations and faithfully and well fulfilled their beautiful task. As a result, the decorations were exceedingly pleasing and beautiful, without involving any additional expense such as has been incurred in former years.

At 8 o'clock a. m. communion service was held with quite a large attendance. The chief service of the day was that which took place at 10.30 o'clock a. m. The auditorium of the church was thronged. The choir was composed of Dr. G. F. Harris, Messrs. Montgomery and Bradley, Misses Richard and Bradley with Miss Mary Bradley as organist. The Easter anthem, which was the opening part of the musical service, was beautiful in the extreme. The Te Deum and the Jubilate Deo were rendered to new and peculiarly triumphant music. The choir demonstrated itself to be fully equal to the occasion and rendered the music in a truly artistic and delightful style, never equaled and seldom excelled in the history of Bellefonte musical services. The voices were all so harmoniously blended as to render separate mention unnecessary where all was so faultless. Rev. John Hewitt's sermon was based on 1 Cor. 15:35—"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" It was a learned exposition of the text guided by the interpretation of the Apostle himself in further remarks on the same subject, which is the most important passage of Scripture that relates to the nature and essence of our resurrected bodies, because it was an answer to a specific question from the church at Corinth. The entire change from the natural to the spiritual which was described is a very delightful view of the question and seems to be borne out by kindred passages on the subject. It was a masterly discourse.

The evening service was largely attended although it was no more elaborate than on ordinary occasions.

THE REFORMED CHURCH.

The floral decorations in this elegant new church were tasteful and the music was pleasing. The chief interest centered about the communion service which was administered with due solemnity. We understand that five persons were received into the church by confirmation.

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH.

This church also held a special Easter service. The floral contributions were becomingly profuse and elegant. Appropriate new music was rendered by the excellent choir. Confirmation and the receiving of members by certificate always form a part of the Easter services. One candidate—Mr. L. Shaffer—presented himself for confirmation and Mr. John Kline was received by certificate.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The services in this church were of the ordinary character on Easter day. The congregations at all the services were very large. A few floral emblems occupied appropriate places.

—That a property worth $71,713.38 should be offered for sale for $40,000 is, to say the least, surprising, and should attract the attention of capitalists. This sum represents the purchase price in addition to actual improvements made upon the Bellefonte Car Works in this place. It is said that during the operation of these works they were remunerative to their owner who, however, does not desire to have the additional business responsibility which they entail. They are in perfect condition for immediate operation, the damage to the flood gate of the water power caused by the recent flood being the only change that has taken place since they closed. This will be repaired as soon as suitable weather arrives. We should think that in view of the fact that this place is becoming a railroad center they would be more valuable than ever. Why cannot some of our citizens purchase the property, engaging the services of an experienced car builder to manage the concern?

—A very sad suicide occurred at Pine Grove Mills on Tuesday of last week. The victim was Mr. Al. W. Ralston, a well known gentleman of that place. He is a contractor by profession and a very skillful mechanic. Lately he has taken contracts at Philipsburg and other places which had proven financial loses to him. His home, we understand, was sold and a deep and profound melancholy controlled all his actions of late. This despondency culminated at the time stated in suicide by shooting, the ball penetrating just behind the left ear. He is still living, but it is thought can not survive. He has a wife, but no children. We understand that since the act of self-destruction was committed he has expressed regret for it.

They have been in the business at Houserville during an uninterrupted period of thirteen years and the change is consequently the more worthy of record. Their goods were moved to Ebensburg last week, the long line of vehicles containing them attracting universal attention in their course through the streets.

Still They Come.

A very large number of Italians, including a few women, arrived on Wednesday, the 21st, at 5 o'clock, to work on the Buffalo Run railroad. They stood near the depot conversing for several minutes after the train departed and then rushed precipitately into the freight room of the depot building. Most of them carried coarse canvas bags containing their clothing, which they deposited in this place. Then they filed up High street and along Allegheny to Bishop street to Mrs. Dolan's boarding house. Their presence elicited the usual interest and curiosity on the part of our citizens.

A Talk About Gas.

On Thursday afternoon a reporter of the NEWS visited the residence of Mr. Robert McKnight to discover the cause for the extremely poor gas which has been furnished the citizens of this borough during the past few nights. For the edification of those who burn coal oil instead of gas we will briefly explain the deplorable plight in which the consumers of the latter have been placed of late. Monday evening of last week was the first that any difficulty was discovered in the gas. Occasionally it would increase with a bright flame and again disappear almost entirely. As may be imagined, the hotels and other public buildings and numerous private residences that relied solely on this means of illumination were in a very unpleasant predicament. On Tuesday evening the condition of affairs was about the same, several public gatherings having to be postponed. Wednesday evening was the time for the general prayer-meetings in the several churches, and we hear that the Methodists and Presbyterians were unable to hold their meetings, the inward spiritual light not being sufficient to cope with lack of exterior illumination. In the other churches, however, the gas burned with sufficient brightness.

Our reporter found that Mr. McKnight is recovering from his recent indisposition and was so obliging as to give a detailed explanation of the difficulty, which we cannot repeat with the clearness and perspicuity which characterized his remarks.

It seems that the gasometer, which extends about thirteen feet below ground, became surrounded with frost and ice, which is unavoidable at this time of year. The ice forced it out of level, one side sinking three feet below the natural height. Here it was caught and remained immovable although Mr. McKnight employed several devices to restore it to its proper position. To add to the difficulties of the situation the gas escaped and water entered the gasometer which could not be expelled until the vessel was righted. This was accomplished on Thursday and Mr. McKnight was of opinion that no difficulty would be experienced the following night, which we believe was thecase.

—"Do you love me much?" asked a young lady of her beau last Saturday evening. "Very much, indeed," he replied, "and my love will always remain tender and true if after our marriage we begin to buy groceries at Sechler's store." "You bet we shall," she replied as their lips met in a kiss the sound of which was heard for miles around.

—Our editorial friend, Mr. Joe Furey, seems to be at sea when he writes on religious topics. For instance, Friday's issue of the Watchman said:

The public schools were dismissed on Wednesday evening until Monday morning next, out of respect for Ascension Thursday (yesterday) and Good Friday (to-day).

Where did our friend get the idea that last Thursday was "Ascension Thursday?" Of course, Christ did not ascend to heaven until forty days after his resurrection, consequently Ascension Thursday will not occur until forty days after Easter, which will be about Thursday, May 3. In the opinion of many, an editor guilty of such a mistake should be turned out of the church.

—Harry Green continues to sell excellent cigars.

Philipsburg Items.

Tenant houses are exceedingly scarce.

Mr. C. G. Fryberger is making preparations for erecting a dwelling house on South Centre street.

The Philipsburg Journal is now printed by steam power.

Mr. E. Bollinger, tailor, is erecting a new residence on Sixth street, above Pine.

Mr. I. V. Gray will erect a large, handsome residence on the northeast corner of Centre and Maple streets. Messrs. Wood & Taylor, contractors and builders, will take charge of the work.

—Harry Teats & Co keep a model grocery store.

—"Claire's" excellent letter from the county seat to the Philipsburg Journal says that "among the changes in places of business will be the removal of Valentines' store company to the Bush block; the occupation of their old place by John Sourbeck, and the opening of George Lewis & Co. in the Humes' block with a wholesale and retail grocery store."

—They go with their baskets to Sechler's store and return with unrestrained expressions of pleasure because of the sugar, coffee, spices and all kinds of groceries and meat which they have purchased.

EASTER.

BY LILLIE E. BARR.

I have no frankincense, no myrrh,
I have no spice, no oil;
But here are snowy Roses, Christ,
Without a stain or soil.
O fairest Lord, for Thy dear sake
My Roses take.

I have no silver, and no gem,
No virgin gold for Thee;
But here are Lilies white as light
And sweet with purity.
O fairest Lord, for Thy dear sake
My Lilies take.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

GODEY'S comes to us this month replete in its colored fashions—surpassing many, and equaling any, of the French magazines. Its reading matter shows a careful selection, and is much above the average of magazine literature. The colored fly-leaf printed in gold is certainly a novelty not heretofore attempted by any magazine, and shows that its new publishers have the enterprise of the present times, which, added to GODEY'S reputation in the past, will enable them undoubtedly to achieve the success which they deserve.

We have received from the publishers, Lee & Walker, a copy of the great Boston song, written by one of Boston's popular vocalists, and it has become so popular that it is being sung everywhere. The song is entitled "ONE WORD FROM THE LOVED ONES AT HOME." This is one of the finest pieces we have heard for some time, and can be had at any music store. Price, 35 cts.

THE LATEST NEWS.

European Sensations.

LONDON, March 18.—Lady Florence Dixie was attacked at Windsor yesterday by two men disguised in women's clothes. Her dress was cut with daggers in several places, but she received no injury. Lady Florence was walking in a secluded spot near the woods when the two men asked her what time it was. She replied that she had no watch, and afterward noticed that though they were in women's clothes their faces had been shaved. Much alarmed she started to walk away and was followed by the men, one of whom seized her. She struggled to escape but, seeing their daggers, fell in a swoon. This took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and she did not recover her senses until 4.45 p. m.

Lady Florence has been prostrated to-day. The story of the affair was elicited from her only at intervals. The saving of her life is attributed to her St. Bernard dog, which it is supposed protected her while she lay in the snow. Lady Florence had no reason to suspect immediate danger. Although she had been somewhat fearful since the receipt of letters about the land league. The last thing she remembers is one of the men pushing a quantity of mud into her mouth. On her recovery she found that both palms were cut across and her gloves severed. There were two dagger holes, two inches apart, in the right breast of her dress. A broad steel corset rib had been broken by the weapon, which had penetrated to the inner lining of her dress, at the first stroke and to her corset at the second stroke. Lady Florence supposed that she unconsciously struggled with the men, assisted by her dog until the scoundrels were disturbed by a cart passing the woods. She received threatening letters while in Ireland recently. One of the men wore a green dress and a large hat with a veil.

LONDON, March 18.—It is stated that Parnell started for Paris yesterday evening

PARIS, March 18.—Up to 3:30 o'clock this afternoon the day has been even quieter than usual. There has been nothing unusual, even at Champ de Mars, where the meeting of communists was announced to take place or at Fere la Chaise cemetery, where many slain communists are buried. In the provinces the only incidents have been a small meeting at St. Etienne, which was dispersed without resistance, and a similar meeting at Rouboix, the dispersal of which was attended with slight resistance, and the arrest of eight persons. There has been no display of troops in Paris.

A Freak of Nature.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 18.—An Indianapolis taxidermist has just completed the mounting of a most curious and wonderful monstrosity. It is a lamb, which was born on the farm of John Vanerder, in Van Buren township, Grant county, and by him presented to Mr. Higbee, of Marion, Ind. Though born alive, it only lived a short time. It has seven legs, two tails and a double mouth. From the head to six inches back of the neck it is perfectly natural (except the double mouth), but from that point the body divides, each half forming a complete body, with two legs and a tail. The hind legs, although perfect in shape, all turn in different directions. On the middle of the back, just in front of where the bodies branch, is the seventh leg, the lower part of which is very slender, but beyond the first joint it branches and forms two large, well-developed feet. The bones in this leg were so arranged as to make the feet stand several inches above the back. The mouth is also a curious malformation, the bones in the lower jaw being placed in such a manner as to keep the jaws apart two inches. To the end of the lower jaw is attached another jaw of solid bone, which has a well-developed row of teeth growing from each side. This bone is placed in such a manner as to close up the mouth. A careful dissection of the body has been made, which revealed the fact that from the neck back the creature had two perfect backbones and that each of the bones in the various legs were naturally fastened to it. It also had two sets of intestines and two lungs, but only one heart.

Exposition of Railway Appliances.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Exhibits for a national exposition of railway appliances, which will open in this city on March 24, are being received in large numbers. Secretary Talbot to-day received a cable dispatch from London stating that the bed engine "Rockett," built by George Stephenson, the first locomotive ever run upon a railroad, has been secured. It is now among the curiosities in the South Kensington museum. The exhibition will have the four oldest engines in existence. The other three include another one from England; one from Nova Scotia, also built by Stephenson, and one owned by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company.

Queen Victoria Meets with a Mishap.

LONDON, March 20.—A dispatch from Windsor says the Queen slipped upon the stairs of the palace on Saturday, and sustained injuries, but was able to hold a council with the ministry yesterday.

Board of Pardons.

HARRISBURG, March 20.—The case of Israel Erb, under sentence of death for the murder of the Kintzlers, in Snyder county, was presented to the board of pardons to-day. A. H. Dill and F. F. Smith made strong pleas for the condemned. Charles Hamer, of Selinsgrove, counsel for the prosecution, opposed the pardon. During the argument the statement was made that Jonathan Moyer's wife on her death bed stated that she was not at Kintzler's as claimed by Mary Hartley. The board granted fifteen days grace in the case.

The other cases were heard and action taken as follows: Joel M. Vanarsdalen, Philadelphia, refused; John Landerman, rape, a continued case, refused; Michael B. Gorman, abortion, refused; Solomon Haines and George Haines, larceny, refused; Eliza Boyd, arson, refused; William McKane, breaking into a store room with intent to commit a felony, refused; John Purcell, rioting, refused; David Hopkins, larceny, application for rehearing, continued till April session; John Kirk, burglary, refused a rehearing; J. G. Hawker, manslaughter, granted a rehearing; Frederick Warren, manslaughter, granted rehearing; Israel Erb, murder in the first degree, postponed till the 4th of April; Silas Grey, murder in the first degree, refused; this application was for a commutation of sentence.

The Trial of Dukes.

UNIONTOWN, March 12.—In the Dukes-Nutt case this afternoon James P. Feather testified that after Dukes and Nutt had been separated in the former's room he pushed Dukes into one corner when Dukes said, "He came in here to whip me and I'll shoot him." Feather replied, "He can't whip you now," but Dukes drew his revolver and fired across the room at Nutt, killing him. Nutt was making no effort to draw a weapon. He was standing at rest with his right arm on the mantel.

Lewis Williams, who also witnessed the shooting, corroborated Feathers in the main points of his evidence. Both witnesses on cross examination became considerably confused, the attorney for the defense showing that their testimony was in some of its features in conflict with the statements they had made before the coroner when the inquest was held.

Wm. Pickard, a clerk in Springer's hardware store, testified that on Friday preceding the Sunday on which the shooting was done he had sold Dukes a 32-calibre, Smith & Wesson double-acting revolver. Dukes selected it with great care from a number of others, saying that he wanted one that was sure. A couple of customers happened to drop into the store at the time, when Dukes concealed himself, saying that he did not want everybody to know his business.

Some other evidence of comparatively little importance was taken, after which the court adjourned until morning.

Lead works Burned.

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 18.—At 10 o'clock last night the Washington lead works took fire in the packing room. The flames extended rapidly until the whole building, the largest in town, was totally destroyed. The building, machinery and materials destroyed are estimated at $150,000. There is an insurance of $80,000 in six companies represented here by Major Happer. The fire at one time threatened the grain elevator of George Davis, and had this taken fire half the town would have been destroyed, as the wind, although not strong, would have carried the flames to adjoining buildings. In the elevator a large amount of wheat was stored and in an adjoining shed there was a large quantity of hay. This is the most extensive fire that has ever visited this town. The lead works were kept running day and night by two sets of hands and about fifty workmen will be thrown out of employment. Several cars, belonging to the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis railway were standing on the side track of the works and narrowly escaped destruction. The buildings were all new and the machinery was very valuable.

Will There be Any Saving?

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 20.—During the closing hours of the last session of congress a bill was passed authorizing and directing the postmaster general to readjust the salaries of certain postmasters. The bill is better known as the "Spaulding bill," and has been considered in every congress since 1872, when it was originally introduced. As finally passed and approved the bill makes no pecuniary provision for carrying out its requirements. It is said at the postoffice department that the law cannot be executed without an appropriation and an additional force of clerks. It is estimated that the readjustment of salaries directed by this bill will require an expenditure of at least $2,000,000, since its provisions apply to eight or ten thousand postmasters.

London's Latest Sensation.

LONDON, March 19.—The Lady Florence Dixie affair is puzzling every one. There is no clue to her assailants. A gardener who was twenty yards from the scene of the attack heard no noise nor observed any indications of an outrage. Lady Florence says she called upon her husband for help. She should be sorry to attribute the outrage to the land league.

Died of Leprosy.

BOSTON, March 19.—Charles D. Erby, a leprous patient at the Salem almshouse, who contracted the disease on the Sandwich Islands and whose case had excited much apprehension, died this evening.

A New Combination.

ST. LOUIS, March 16.—The Age of Steel to-morrow will publish the following, which, it states, refers to a matter entirely new to the iron trade of the north: During the past two weeks a combination has been formed in the south composed of all the coke iron furnaces in the states of Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, with the exception of the Oakdale, Tenn., furnace, to be known as the Southern Coke Association. The object is to obtain and maintain a uniform scale of prices and prevent indiscriminate competition and trickery of all kinds. A uniform scale of prices has been agreed upon and agents are required to strictly abide thereby. It places all brands of iron on the same platform, so that a furnace making an iron of low standard will get the same price as for high standard. That is if they sell any. The advantages will be seen to be on the side of the maker of the better brands, while the other man will have to work hard to make sales at all. The scale agreed upon is not above the prices which have been ruling lately, except on a few grades, and they are all on the basis of the fixed price at the furnace adding transportation.

State Legislature.

HARRISBURG, March 20.—In the house the bill establishing a state board of health was defeated—yeas, 90; nays, 78—less the constitutional majority. The house in committee of the whole amended the bill fixing the supreme court district of the state by taking Cameron, Elk, Lancaster and Montour from the middle district, and Crawford from the western district, and attaching them to the eastern, and providing that the court sit twenty-five weeks in Philadelphia instead of twenty, and five weeks in Harrisburg instead of eight. After some discussion the bill passed third reading as amended.

An Opinion Touching Dukes.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Assistant Attorney General Freeman, the law officer of the postoffice department, said to-day that the law in regard to the mailing of obscene matter does not in his opinion make the sending of letters of an obscene nature when under seal an indictable offense. This remark was in reply to an inquiry as to the possible application of the law to the case of Dukes. Judge Freeman added, however, that the subject had not been brought to his attention officially and that as yet he has not examined the particular case referred to.

Charged with Assault.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—James W. Bosler, who was arrested at Carlisle to-day, on the charge of assaulting a deputy United States marshal who served him with a subpœna to appear as a witness in the star route trial at Washington, was brought here to-day and given a hearing. He was held in $1,000 to answer at the May term of the United States district court.

In Favor of Peace.

LONDON, March 19.—The Universal Arbitration and Peace society publish a letter from President Arthur acknowledging the receipt of a letter which the society sent commending the president's reference in his last annual message to arbitration. The society draw from the president's response that he sympathizes with their object.

Hanged in Effigy.

READING, March 18.—The jury which acquitted Dukes, the Slayer of Captain Nutt, at Uniontown, was hanged in effigy just outside of Shoemakersville. A number of citizens quietly proceeded to a point along the railroad and strung up to a tree twelve figures, composed of old clothes well filled out with straw. The effigies could be plainly seen by passing trains.

Maine Elections.

BELFAST, March 12.—George Johnston, the tax candidate, has been re-elected mayor.

BANGOR, March 12.—There was no choice for mayor at the election to-day. The republicans have elected the other officers.

BIDDEFORD, March 12.—The democrats have elected Edward Stahlo mayor and carried the city.

A Boy Shot and Fatally Injured.

PITTSBURG, March 19.—John Bachsmeyer, aged 17, fired at a party of boys to-day with a pistol, fatally injuring a boy named Woods.

A Miracle.

Whenever there is an extraordinary occurrence—a team runs over a child without hurting it; a mechanic falls from a third-story window, and in a week after he is at work again, we are wont to exclaim, "what a miracle!" So, when Mrs. T. S. Eberline, then of Allegheny City, Pa., had been sick with consumption for a very long time, had been told by several of the best physicians of that city that her time was but for a few hours, that she must die, and when the use of but one bottle of Peruna in a week's time placed her on her feet again and made her the heartiest eater of the family, all the people around, as with one rejoicing voice, exclaimed, "What a wonderful miracle!" See page 30 of the "Ills of Life." Your druggist will give you one gratis.

"It's a ole sayin' dat one bird in de han' is wuth two in de bush," says Uncle Joe. "It may be wuth more ter de man, but it ain't wuth half as much ter de bird."

E. K. McConkey, Hillam, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters relieved me of a dull, heavy pain in my head with tired and languid feelings."

The Northwest.

Oregon newspapers, reviewing the events of the past year, show the existence of a remarkable degree of prosperity in that state. Ten years ago the population of Portland was less than 12,000. To-day it is nearly three times that number, and is continually increasing. During 1882 $3,000,000 was spent upon new buildings in that city, and $400,000 on its streets. Its wholesale trade for the year amounted to $40,000,000, and the exports to $23,128,981.

Equally favorable reports come from Washington territory, whose vast forests of valuable timber furnish an article of export that is wanted in all parts of the world. Thirty years ago Puget Sound's first saw mill was built. To-day there are numerous towns in which lumber sawing is the main industry. In 1881 175,000,000 cubic feet of lumber was exported. The amount sawed in 1882 is estimated at over 300,000,000 feet. The mills are nearly all lighted by electricity, and are the scene of ceaseless labor. Various kindred forms of industry have arisen out of the abundance of timber, including cooperage and shipbuilding.

Among recent settlers in this favored region are some of the Russian Jewish immigrants, and reports received from their settlements give good ground for believing in a successful issue to their agricultural experiments. Altogether both Oregon and Washington territory seem to be thriving to a much greater degree than California, their southern neighbor, and are attracting comparatively a larger share of immigration.

An Austin clerk is in the habit of drawing his salary for several months in advance. A few mornings ago he came down to the store half an hour later than usual. "what makes you so late?" asked the proprietor. "It was so cold I didn't like to get up." "I don't see how you came to find it cold," growled the boss. "You drew your salary for next June yesterday."

Choice Extracts from Druggists.

"Best kidney medicine on our shelves."

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

"The largest bottle and best medicine."

"Our best people take 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Sure cure for chills and liver diseases."

Kissing by Telephone.

This is the use to which the telephone is put in Iowa, according to the Lyons Mirror: An eavesdropper "took this off" the other morning when the thermometer stood at ten below:

He (in Lyons)—Is that you, dearest?

She (in Clinton) Yes, love.

He—Put the mouth piece to your lips.

She—Yes, what!

He (kisses)—That!

She—Oh, my! Was that lightning?

He—Did you get it, dearest?

She—Yes, love—cool and distinct, but so sweet. Call again.

A CURE FOR "CRICK IN THE BACK."—The prescription is very brief: Take Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine. It infallibly cures. Do you know that a "Crick in the back" may be—probably is—a symptom of dangerous kidney disease—of the frightful Bright's Disease, perhaps? Don't "fool" with such symptoms, reader. Get Hunt's remedy, and with it assured safety at once. Many a man has started with a pain in the back on Monday morning, and been laid in the grave with Bright's Disease before Saturday night.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1.00. If your lungs are sore, chest or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by John Harris.

A Model County.

Fulton county does not have a foot of railroad within her borders. Nor does she have a county bridge; she has no almshouse. There is not a distillery in the county. She has only six licensed houses and three of these are in McConnellsburg. She has no county debt and has a cash balance in the hands of her county treasurer.

Suffering is Needless.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 21, 1881.

H. H. WARNER & Co: Sirs—I find that palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, dyspepsia and pains in the kidneys yield easily and gracefully to your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. ROBERT H. THURSTON.

Here's a pretty fix. The government doesn't know what to do with the Weather Bureau, and the people don't know what to do with the weather.

Thomas McElwee, Mt. Carmel, Pa., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is unexcelled as a remedy for indigestion and general debility."

A Family of Seven Daughters.

A Michigan father had a family of seven daughters, either of whom was old enough to marry. The young men burned up his coal and kerosene, eat his apples and pumpkin pie, but nothing more. Finally he locked the girls up in upper rooms, nailed up the front gate, and announced that the first young man who came around would be received by a shotgun. This had the right effect, for the girls were one by one stolen and married.

THE PUREST AND BEST.

Remedy Ever Made.—It is Compounded from Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake and Dandelion.

The oldest, best, most renowned and valuable medicine in the world, and in addition it contains all the best and most effective curative properties of all other remedies, being the greatest liver regulator, blood purifier, and life and health restoring agent on earth.

It gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To clergymen, lawyers, literary men, ladies, and all whom sedentary employments cause irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require an appetizer, tonic, and mild stimulant, it is invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without being intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, or what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable use the bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing, at a moderate cost. Ask your druggist or physician. Do not suffer yourself or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

If you have lameness in the loins, with frequent pains and aches; numbness of the thigh; scanty, painful and frequent discharge of urine, filled with pus, and which will turn red by standing; a voracious appetite and unquenchable thirst; harsh and dry skin; clammy tongue, often darkly furred; swollen and inflamed gums; dropsical swellings of the limbs; frequent attacks of hiccough; inability to void the urine, and great fatigue in attempting it—you are suffering from some form of Kidney or Urinary Complaint, such as BRIGHT'S DISEASE of the kidneys, stone or inflammation of the bladder, gravel and renal calculi, diabetes, stranguary stricture and retention of the urine, and Hop Bitters is the only remedy that will permanently cure you.

Remember Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the purest and best medicine ever made, and no family should be without it.

Don't risk any of the highly lauded stuff with testimonials of great cures, but ask your neighbor, druggist, pastor or physicians what Hop Bitters has and can do for you and test it.

This is the quickest tax settlement that has ever been made from that township.

—There is a probability that "Eli Perkins," the great humorist, will lecture in Bellefonte before the weather waxes hot, although no definite arrangements have yet been made to that effect. If he comes we hope it will be before the effects of the Lenten fast have entirely disappeared, as undue corpulency added to "Eli's" irresistable humor might effect vest buttons disastrously.

—A gang of twelve men began work at a point near Snow Shoe, recently, on an entirely new railroad, supposed to be the Susquehanna and Allegheny, which is to extend from Pauxsutawney, Jefferson county, through Jefferson, Indiana, Clearfield, Centre, Clinton, Lycoming and Union counties to West Milton on the Susquehanna river, a distance of 150 miles. The charter for this railroad was granted only one month ago.

The mountain city is surely entitled to congratulation on the fact that it includes among its citizens such prominent disciples of Bogardus and Carver.

MILLIONS IN IT.

The Untold Natural Wealth of Centre County as Illustrated by the Ore Beds of Nittany Valley.

The people of Centre county are awakening to the pleasurable fact that they reside in the richest section of country in this the richest State in the Union. Like the wonders of a newly-discovered cavern it stretches away from them in all directions and their wealth has not yet been estimated even approximately.

This wealth consists largely in iron ore, which will last longer and is of greater value than the gold of California, the wealth of the Indies or even the much-vaunted coal of Clearfield county. It should attract the attention of capitalists from all parts of the country. Let Wall street, New York, here find an investment for her millions of money and surplus business energy. Home capital is not lacking, but to our bosoms we hug our wealth. Rust will corrupt and moth will consume and it may be that we will some day find that naught but empty air remains in our grasp.

We have no practical experience, we boast of no intuitive or acquired knowledge on the subject, but let us examine what figures have heretofore demonstrated and estimates that may be based upon them.

Three miles east of Bellefonte is what is known as the Gatesburg bank, operated for many years by Valentines & Co. This wonderful deposit of ore (but perhaps not more wonderful than hundreds of others in the county) dates back at least seventy years under the operation of this one firm. Surveyors knew of it as a prominent mark away back in the past history of the county. During that three-fourths of a century it has been pouring forth its riches and has made fortunes for its owners. It covers only five acres, but from it 300,000 tons of ore have been taken, or an average of 60,000 tons per acre! Just think of it. At an average of 50 cents per ton (which is less than the present price) it would represent $30,000 per acre! And it is yet apparently as rich as ever. The ordinary depth is 20 feet, but it has been drilled to a depth of 280 feet and the full extent of these wonderful deposits of ore not reached. The depth of the riches of this deposit can not be estimated. Show us gold deposits, diamond fields or even Clearfield coal mines which will equal it!

But Gatesburg Bank is but a "drop in the bucket" compared with the extent of Nittany Valley alone, thousands of acres of which are on a par with it, and nearly all in Centre county. From Washington Furnace to the Centre line, a distance of 35 miles, the foot of man treads carelessly over ground in every square foot of which exists a mine of wealth which can be brought forth by simple contrivances fully tested. No experiment is required. No danger of failure exists. There are 640 acres in one square mile. At the least estimate, this would represent $20,000,000, a sum worth fishing for. There are as fine fish in the sea as have ever been caught.

We have heretofore said that 100,000 people would inhabit Bellefonte in A. D. 1900. Ten thousand of these should be iron workers. Twenty rolling mills may be operated constantly as long as the world rolls around on its axis. The great obstacle to a complete realization of this (insufficient railroad facilities) will soon be a thing of the past. The march of progress has begun. We shall close this subject for the present and hope to record further developments in the near future.

The Bellefonte Steel Works.

This institution is located northwest of the glass works. All of last summer and during this winter preparations have been in progress for arranging and putting in place machinery of great value for what is in some sense a new and novel industry—converting pig iron into steel by Henderson's process. Mr. Henderson, the inventor, it is said, has secured patents upon inventions which in the aggregate represent a greater amount of wealth than those of any single individual whose inventions ever came before the patent office at Washington. Many of them were on exhibition at the Centennial and won warm approval from competent critics. The present process is only one of many which he has invented, several of which have been entirely successful. He is extremely reticent about having them alluded to in public prints and for that reason we suppressed an article written some time ago on the subject. We confess our inability to understand the use of even a tithe of the valuable machinery now in the building, and it is owing to the fact that within a few days, perhaps by the time this is published, the aim of all this work is about to be consummated that we refer to it now. We are informed that a practical test will be made next week and the machinery put in operation. It is not contemplated to run the works here entensively. Only a comparatively small force of workmen will be employed, and it will serve as a model for more extensive industries of the kind in other places.

An item in regard to this institution which is to us of great interest is the high station, wealth and prominence of the gentlemen whose capital is invested in it. One of these is Chas. G. Francklyn, of New York City. The name at once carries us in mind to the famous Francklyn cottage at Long Branch, where the immortal Garfield feasted his vision upon the broad, blue ocean as he lay upon his death bed in the last hours of his mortal agony. As is well known, the owner of the cottage considered the high honor of entertaining so distinguished a guest sufficient compensation and never asked for anything more. This generous gentleman is possessed of great wealth and is one of the owners of the steel works. The other is Mr. Thomas F. Rowland, of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the most distinguished engineers in the United States. He is also largely concerned in the business interests of Brooklyn.

We are requested to announce in connection with this article that on no account will any visitors be permitted to enter the works. The owners have their special reason for this strict prohibition.

Italians Arrive to Work on the Railroad.

The five o'clock p. m. train brought forty Italians to this place on Monday of last week to work on the Bellefonte and Buffalo Run Railroad. The first man who saw them called them Hungarians, and after that every body designated them by that nationality, but Mr. Collins says that there is not a Hungarian among them and that they are all Italians. Our mercantile citizen, Mr. Adolph Loeb, found this invading host temporary headquarters at Mrs. Dolan's boarding house on Bishop street and thither they were marshalled, being the "observed of all observers" as they paraded up High street. During the remainder of the evening the visitors were the subject of remark among all our citizens.

They virtually began operations on Tuesday, the 20th. The road, which is to be seventeen miles in length, will be commenced at a point between Buffalo Run Valley and State College, in what is known as "The Barrens," and will be worked in the direction of the College. Work is commenced at that point first because it can be done more advantageously at this time of year than on the Buffalo Run portion and also because the difficulty in regard to the right of way along the latter end of the road is not yet satisfactorily adjusted. Therefore the citizens along Buffalo Run need not fear that their peace and quiet will be disturbed for several weeks to come.

A gang of Negroes, who are to be employed on the road, will be conveyed by a different route.

The jury to assess damages on the portions of the right of way under dispute will meet on the 17th of April. Although the projectors of the enterprise want to do justice by all parties they have no time to waste in useless argument and arbitration as the road must be completed this year.

Only a Tender Plant.

All winter long it has occupied a place in the conservatory or near the unpretentious window. Its branches have been extending and its main stem strengthening, while bright green leaves have made it beautiful to behold. Perhaps, however, it is but a modest plant with tender associations clinging around it. It was the gift of a friend who with the departing snows has passed away. How much it will be cherished and tenderly and constantly cared for and nurtured for this reason! There are perhaps many such house plants in all stages of development in Bellefonte this spring. Last fall the hands that gathered the seed or that plucked the sprout were exerting themselves for the care and attention of others. Now the owners of those hands have bade their friends farewell, their bodies are inanimate and newly formed mounds mark their resting place. Then treasure the gift which reminds you of them, even if it be an almost leafless and entirely blossomless house plant. Do not put it where frost will kill it; keep it in its old place until June sunshine is here and then let it receive the full, generous life which summer rain and heat alone can give —Our esteemed citizen, J. Fearon Mann, removed last week from his pretty residence on East High street to the fine mansion recently purchased of Mrs. C. DeLacey Evans on Allegheny street. We understand that Dr. J. W. Rhone will occupy the residence which Mr. Mann vacated. The Doctor's business headquarters will not, however, be moved.

—Mr. C. T. Gerberich, the experienced miller of this place, had the pleasure recently of entertaining his cousin, Mr. Lyman S. Gerberich, a member of the extensive firm of Gerberich Bros., general agents for importers of musical instruments and violin strings, located at Mansfield, O. The gentleman's stay in Bellefonte has been exceedingly agreeable to himself and profitable to all with whom he came in contact. He is a thorough artist on about all the musical instruments in general and popular use and his skill has caused some of the instruments in this neighborhood, which heretofore were not known to possess any extraordinary qualities, to "fairly talk," under his delicate manipulation. Mr. Gerberich spent two years under the best instruction of the most competent masters at the Conservatory of Music at Leipsic, Germany, his specialty being the violin, from which he can draw most exquisite sounds. Mr. Gerberich is much pleased with Bellefonte, his large experience and extensive travels through this country and Europe enabling him to express his praises with deliberation and discrimination. But what he has already seen may induce him to return for a protracted visit next summer.

Death of Mrs. Maggie V. Gray.

On Saturday evening, March 17, the dark messenger, Death, invaded the household of our popular townsman, Mr. John P. Harris, on Linn street, and removed one of its members, Mrs Maggie V. Gray, who had been staying there during her illness of consumption.

Mrs. Gray's home was at Buffalo Run. She was the wife of George S. Gray, of that place, and the sister of Mr. John P. Harris, at whose residence her death occurred.

The deceased was born in Bellefonte and was the daughter of Samuel Harris, Esq. She was widely and favorably known. Her age was about 49 years. She was a devout member of the M. E. church and her final hours were comforted by the consolation which a fervent faith always gives.

The funeral took place from the residence of Mrs. Gray's brother, Mr. John P. Harris, on Linn street, on Tuesday afternoon, the 20th, at 2 o'clock.

—President Robert McKnight was too ill to be present at the regular meeting of borough council last week, and Mr. John Ardell presided as President pro tem. —We cheerfully give place to the following communication from Mr. George B. Nash, proprietor of the Spring Mills Hotel. As will be perceived, a salutary change has "come o'er the spirit of his dreams:"

SPRING MILLS HOUSE, Centre Co., Pa.
March 14th, 1883.

MR. EDITOR: Sir: Please inform the public that the big hotel (as above) will be run as a temperance house from April 1st, 1883, and for the next four years, and the hall and park will be free to temperance people for lectures or entertainments of clubs or associations. This is a good place for the meeting of farmers clubs and societies and this is the field for temperance lectures. Let us have them and also a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. There is a great need for temperance people and reformers here.

Truly yours,
GEORGE B. NASH.

—As our readers well know and as we would like the business community at large to be informed, the car works of this place are offered for sale for $40,000. The terms of sale are 15 per cent. on day of sale, 35 per cent. on day of delivery, 25 per cent. one year from day of sale and 25 per cent two years from day of sale. The property is worth $71,713.38, consequently it is offered for about 50 per cent. of actual value. The location of the establishment is unsurpassed and the individual or company who purchases it will obtain a bonanza. If any capitalists will lend us $50,000 on 20 years' time we will invest in the establishment and make money.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, when sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations are done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co. Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and Ball & Ruckel, New York. 14 24 1y

—Mr. Jonathan Weaver died at his home near Farmer's Mills on Friday, the 16th instant. His disease was internal cancer, which so often proves fatal. His wife survives him, and his mother, now in her 85th year, is also still living. He leaves a family of nine children. The deceased was aged 58 years, 4 months and 30 days. The funeral, which occurred on Sunday, the 18th, was a great demonstration of popular sympathy.

"GONE TO HER REST."

Death of the Mother of the Editor of the "Bellefonte Republican"—From a Life of Labor and Love to the Resurrection of the Just.

Several months have intervened since Mrs. Nancy S. Tuten, mother of the editor of the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN, arrived from her home in Mont Vernon, New Hampshire, to pass the winter at the residence of her son in this place. She was accompanied by a daughter, Miss Esther P. Tuten—the mother and daughter looking forward to a pleasant visit and a joyful return to Munt Vernon in the Spring. But how has their joy been turned to sorrow! Several weeks ago Mrs. Tuten grew ill, the sickness which all hoped was but temporary became alarming—at death's door she lingered a few brief days, and then on Wednesday morning, March 14th, at 5 o'clock, the last spark of life fled, and angels oped the pearly gates to welcome a sanctified spirit into the eternal joys of the New Jernsalem. For those who consistently follow in the same paths what boundless joy is there in the contemplation that they may be reunited where there will be no parting.

The subject of this narrative was the child of Isaac and Pamelia Smith of Deering, New Hampshire. She was born on the 14th day of April, 1820, and at the time of her death was in the 63d year of her earthly life. On the 6th of October, 1838, she was happily married to Robert P. Tuten of Cambridge, Mass., seven children—two sons and five daughters—being the issue of this union. One of these died in infancy, the remaining six having reached the age of maturity with the promise of long and happy lives before them. Robert Tuten, husband of the deceased, died on the 7th of September, 1851, aged forty-five years.

After the death of her husband Mrs. Tuten moved to Mont Vernon, New Hampshire, all of her children accompanying her to that place where, nurtured by a mother's love, kind care and attention, they increased in stature and wisdom. The children—now men and women—will ever hold in grateful recollection the memory of a mother's devotion during this period. Against obstacles and disadvantages which would have conquered some she reared these children with an aim to their physical health and happiness, giving to each one an eminently practical education.

Mrs. Tuten was a consistent Christian and a member of the Orthodox church. Her piety was demonstrated in every act of her life. All who knew her attest to her many virtues and the beneficent influence that flowed from them. Grasping the Cross of Christ with the tenacity of a fervent faith, she has entered upon the joys of the just. Those who still tread the path of mortal life are beckoned to follow. A pure life, a peaceful death, a triumph of faith are the influences which should be all-sufficient to impress the hearts of those who knew her best—

"To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified."

On Thursday afternoon, a few minutes past 3 o'clock, appropriate services were held at the house, quite a large number of friends and neighbors assembling to give expression to their sympathy by joining in those ceremonies. Two hymns—"Jesus, Lover of my Soul," and "Abide with Me,"—were sung by the choir and Rev William Laurie made the introductory prayer, read the 25th Psalm and spoke feelingly from the text, "For it is appointed unto all men once to die and after death the judgment." Rev. R. Crittenden delivered the closing prayer.

Messrs. James H. Rankin, E. C. Humes, John Ardell, Jr., David Butts, Hammon Sechler and Dr. T. R. Hayes acted as pall-bearers, Messrs. George Jenkins, John G. Love and James Gordon assisting the mourners to enter and alight from their carriages. Mr. E. T. Tuten and Miss Esther accompanied the body to Mont Vernon, New Hampshire, where it will be laid in its last resting place.

—One of the most sensible bills before the Pennsylvania legislature is one prohibiting juries assessing costs on a person whom they find "not guilty." To pronounce a man "innocent" of a given charge, and in the next breath to sentence him to the penalty of paying the expenses of his own trial, is such an obvious burlesque on justice that we wonder the courts themselves have not protested against it long before this.

—A body of the "Sons of Veterans" is to be organized in Lock Haven.

OUR IRON ORE WEALTH.

A Prospect that Will Delight the Capitalist—An Investment for Thousands from which Millions May be Realized.

The active mind of the business man is ceaselessly engaged in projects having in view the enlargement of his material resources. Often, also, he is generous enough to think of the interests of those not so fortunate in the possession of minds capable of conceiving vast plans for such accumulations, and then his manifold possessions serve a double purpose.

To the fortunate possessor of even limited capital, coupled with a mind capable of grasping the various aspects of a situation which offers golden opportunities, Centre county presents a field in which the grain stands ripe for the sickle. Energy, perseverance, pluck are the magic words, the "open sesame" which shall display to view the glorious wealth of Alladin's cavern. We shall lift the veil and ask the capitalist to enter in and possess the land.

Gastesburg ore bank, located three miles east of Bellefonte and operated by Valentines & Co., has been already alluded to. It is in the midst of an almost boundless tract of ore lands of wonderful richness. We have demonstrated that one square mile of such land may be made to realize to its owner $20,000,000! But the other equally rich tracts did not receive much attention.

Proceeding west only a short distance we come to the Curtin bank which is only about one-half mile east of Mr. James Curtin's residence. This has been proved to be equal to the others and has been very profitable to its owners, even without the aid of the necessary railroad outlet for its productions. What is generally known as Logan Branch is located about a half mile east of Mann's Axe Factory and is owned by the Curtins. It has been demonstrated to be literally inexhaustible. We use the term "inexhaustible" advisedly, because all the drafts which have been made upon it in search of the precious ore have failed to show any end to the supply. The work of mining has just begun. Years before many of our readers were born Roland Curtin, father of the venerable Governor A. G. Curtin, tapped what is known as the old Curtin Bank, where after all these years a rich deposit of ore awaits the patient, skillful worker. A mile southwest of Curtin's Logan Branch is the old Logan Furnace Bank. This is included in the ore deposits on Robert Valentine's property as well as the Nye Bank, a mile southeast of Gatesburg Bank, which is considered by some to excell even the Gatesburg Bank in the wealth of its deposit. Other banks owned by Valentine & Co., are the Taylor and Hamilton banks. They include a wonderfully rich ore territory of three miles square, which, carrying out our former estimates, means $180,000,000.

A short distance north of Hecla Furnace is another wide stretch of ore lands on which the firm of Linn & McCoy are operating several banks. They are also, we are pleased to state, located in the direct line of the proposed and already surveyed Nittany Valley railroad, which takes a southeastern course from Bellefonte to Mill Hall, a distance of 21 miles. When it is taken into consideration that this latter firm also own immense ore tracts along the line of the Buffalo Run railroad the enviable situation which their enterprize has placed them in may be approximately realized. They have recently made additional purchases.

The superior quality of this ore is well known. From it the finest and most durable iron, steel and wire have been made. In the expositions of the world they take the highest prizes and in chemical analyses the ore stands the severest test.

The region in which this ore may be found should be threaded with railroads, the scream of the iron horse should echo and re-echo among the hills. The hand of industry and skill should lay hold upon it and the ore should not leave Centre Co. until it is converted into its finished state. Every stage of development marks an increase in value and adds to the wealth and importance of the community; therefore the various works of transformation should be done at home.

The larger part of this ore land is in the possession of private parties who have neither the money, skill or disposition to work it, reared as they have been to quiet rural life, and unaware for decades of their wealth. That they are ready in many cases to respond to the advances of capital that will come to buy or to aid by affording better railroad facilities, we instance the fact that many of them (among whom are Judge Divens and Mr. Strouble, of near State College), have erected the necessary apparatus and are prepared to ship away immense quanties of ore as soon as the Buffalo Run Railroad shall be completed. It has been urged against the building of railroads that new lines render old lines of less value. That can never be the case in Centre Co. If the ore deposits are anything like as valuable as we have estimated the output from them of raw material and the opportunities for manufactures which that material affords are simply boundless.

Conference Appointments.

The Central Pennsylvania Conference of that great and growing religious denomination—the Methodist Episcopal Church—which met at Chambersburg week before last, held its final session on Tuesday evening, the 20th instant. It was, as usual, exceedingly interesting and was a representative body of the church in this vicinity. Several of the greater lights of the church were present, including Rev. Dr. Vincent, who gave some of his admirable talks, among them being the famous lecture on "That Boy." Bishop Simpson, who is perhaps foremost among the great prelates of the church in America, was present, and also Chaplain McCabe, who is always "a host in himself."

The appointments were read by the Bishop. It would require too much space in the REPUBLICAN to give all of them and we will publish only those of Altoona district together with a few others which we know to be of special interest to our Methodist readers:

In the Williamsport district we notice that Rev. Mortimer P. Crosthwaite will supply the churches at Beech Creek and Mill Hall. Rev. J. Max Lantz returns to Lock Haven.

Rev. Martin L. Smyzer is presiding elder of the Danville district and Rev. John Donahue will go to Ashland.

Rev. B. B. Hamlin becomes pastor of the Ridge Avenue church, Harrisburg. Rev. J. A. Woodcock, formerly of Milesburg, goes to Mechanicsburg. Rev. S. C. Swallow goes to the first M. E. church, York, and Rev. A. R. Cronce goes to Duke street church, that city.

Military Matters.

On Friday Adjutant General Major D. S. Keller, Lieutenant Colonel D. H. Hastings, Captain Mullen, of Company B, N. G., First Lieutenant G. L. Potter, of Company B, and Major George F. Harris, all of this place, went to Altoona to participate in the election of persons to succeed Colonel Burchfield and Lieut. Colonel Hastings, whose commissions had expired.

At 8 o'clock the warriors, composed of large delegations of captains and first and second lieutenants assembled in the parlor of the Logan House. The election was conducted by Adjutant General Major D. S. Keller. Major George F. Harris, of this place, and Adjutant E. M. Amies, of Altoona, acted as clerks. Although Colonel Burchfield had declined to be a candidate for re-election his name was put forward again, the other candidate being Major Samuel W. Davis, of Ebensburg. The election resulted in the choice of Major Davis,

For lieutenant colonel, Captain J. S. Garrett, Captain S. F. Statler and Lieutenant Colonel Hastings were nominated. Captain Garrett was elected on the first ballot.

The candidates for major were S. F. Statler and Amos Mullen, the former being elected.

The retiring officers have the respect of their brother officers and of those under them in command. Rotation in office is, however, an American maxim which works well in military affairs. Colonel Davis, Lieut. Colonel Garrett and Major Statler will make brilliant and successful officers.

—Johnny Given, an 11-year old stepson of Mr. John Bartruff of Bishop street, was so unfortunate as to fall from Bower's grocery wagon Saturday morning, breaking his left arm at the elbow. The break is quite serious and we sympathize with the lad as it will confine him in-doors for some time.

Personal Penellings.

Ex-Judge Samuel Linn, of Williamsport, is ill.

Mr. W. E. Burchfield spent Sunday with his family in this place.

Mr. Jacob Gephart, of Millheim, owns about $1,000 worth of tobacco.

J. M. Bell of this place registered at the Hepburn House at Williamsport on Saturday.

W. F. Reynolds, Jr., of Bellefonte, registered at the Park Hotel, Williamsport, last Friday.

John S. Foster of Lemont, will assume the proprietorship of the State College hotel on the 1st of April.

Mr. Al. W. Ralston, the attempted suicide of Pine Grove Mills, is still alive, his condition being slightly improved.

Dr. J. W. Rhone on Monday moved into the pretty stone residence on East High street just vacated by J. Fearon Mann.

Mr. F. X. Lehman, of the Butts House, after a siege of illness, is convalescent, and looks as hale and handsome as of yore.

Miss May Best, one of Lock Haven's fairest maidens, is visiting at the residence of Mr. Win Montgomery, of this place.

Mr. H. Myers, of Norristown, at one time proprietor of the Bush House in this place, has been spending a few days in Bellefonte.

Mr. Isaac Haupt says he saw some wild pigeons the other day, but he didn't shoot them and consequently can't eat pigeon pie.

We are informed that Rev. W. T. Wylie, formerly pastor of the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, made a flying visit to this place last week.

Mr. Valentine Smith, of Valentines Store Company "Limited," is temporarily a widower, his wife being absent on a two-weeks visit among her friends.

Miss Polsgrove, daughter of Rev. Mr. Polsgrove, of Philipsburg, is the guest of the Misses Devling, daughters of Joseph Devling, Esq., of Howard street.

Dr. Augustus Hibler has purchased of Dr. E. W. Hale the stone residence on Allegheny street between the Montgomery and Curtin residences. He will occupy it after the 1st of April.

We are pleased to know that our talented friend, Hon. A. G. Curtin, will remain at his home in this place during the coming spring and summer with only occasional visits to Washington.

A correspondent of the Altoona Tribune says that Miss Clara Kline, of Howard, and Miss Nellie Kline, of this place, spent Sunday last at the residence of Mr. Harry C. Brew, of Tyrone.

Mr. John Anderson, of restaurant fame, entertained twenty-four persons at one time in his dining rooms one day recently. People will eat, you know, and John and his assistants are first-class caterers.

W. F. Reeder, Esq., expects to erect a handsome residence on the corner of Spring and Curtin streets. The corner lot, which he owns, is not considered large enough to suit his purposes and he is negotiating for the one next to it.

Miss Laura Hemphill, of Erie, is visiting at the home of her relative, Mrs. W. E. Burchfield, of this place. Miss H. is an exceedingly accomplished and vivacious young lady and her presence will be a source of great pleasure to her numerous Bellefonte friends.

Mr. C. G. McMillen, of the Brockerhoff House, went to Williamsport the other day and registered at a hotel. The papers altered his name by printing it Miller. There are Millers enough in Bellefonte, in all conscience; don't deprive us of our one and only McMillen.

Rev. Mr. Tomlinson, of Millheim, married three couples in one evening recently and for lack of time was compelled to refuse the fourth application for his services. It seemed as though all the young folks in the community had decided to get married right away.

Mr. Al. Baney, of this place, while descending the terrace at the rear of Mr. H. K. Hicks' residence on Linn street on Friday evening, stumbled and fell to the ground below, spraining his ankle very severely. He was unable to use the injured member, and had to be carried to his home.

Mr. M. L. Schneeberg and family departed on Monday for Blossburg, Tioga county, Pa., where Mr. S. is also removing his store—the "Boston Clothing House." Mr. S. believes that Blossburg is a better place for business than Bellefonte. We regret his departure as we have always found him upright and honorable in all his business relations.

From Philipsburg Journal: "Mr Herman Robb, of Bellefonte who has for a long while been engaged at Graham's boot and shoe manufactory, in that place, has become a resident of Philipsburg, and is now with J. Sankey & Son, boot and shoe manufacturers and dealers, Front street. Mr. R. is a genial young man and a first-class workman."

The Harrisburg Independent, of a few days since, says: "Cyrus E. Woods, formerly connected with the newspaper press of this city, has accepted a position in the Auditor General's office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Philadelphia." Mr. Woods is a Centre county young man and has been connected with Harrisburg journalism during the past year.

Dr. T. R. Hayes has disposed of his handsome residence on Linn street to Mr. Milliken for about $11,000. The Doctor and his lady will soon embark on an ocean voyage to the continent of Europe, where they will spend two years in travel, the Doctor expecting to pick up all the information he can in regard to "Our Eyes," and when he returns will give the people the benefit of that knowledge. When they again come to America they must erect another residence in Bellefonte and make it their home. We are thus particular to mention this part of the programme because we have heard that the Doctor, in search of fame, contemplates fixing his residence in one of the large cities. However, we cordially wish the Doctor and his lady bon voyage and a safe return.

An Excellent Improvement.

An improvement which is certainly worthy of notice has recently been made in the Logan Hose Company building. A tier of forty-eight very neat compartments, or closets, have been placed along one side of the large room on the first floor. This gives one compartment to each member of the company and is intended as a receptacle for his uniform and other regalia which he is only expected to wear when on duty. Each man has a separate lock and key to his individual compartment. Nothing more appropriate than this can be imagined and we congratulate the company on their continued improvement and prosperity.

A Marriage at Martha.

A very enjoyable wedding occurred at Martha on Thursday evening, the 22d instant, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. S. Williams. The contracting parties were Mr. William Roup, of State College, and Miss Olie Williams, Rev. J. T. Holmes, of Tyrone, officiating. The reverend gentleman arrived from Tyrone on the evening train and the ceremony was solemnized about 9 o'clock p. m., in the presence of thirty-seven guests, some from Bellefonte and Philipsburg. A large collection of beautiful presents was received. We wish them a long and pleasant voyage through life.

—The young men's orchestra was present at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, rendering very pleasing music. Rev. E. Edwards delivered a sermon to young men which, to our mind, conveyed lessons which are very much needed at the present time.

—Great droves of cattle have been receivd by Bellefonte butchers during the past week.

—Oranges are the Bellefonte "staff of life" just now.

—He is now ex-Lieut. Colonel D. H. Hastings.
